NORRIS ASKS SHOWDOWN ON VARE

Nebraskan Offers Resolution For Immediate Decision; May Hold Up Tariff Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—An immediate decision on the three-year-old contest over the right of William S. Vare (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, to a seat in the Senate was asked today by Senator Norris (Rep.), Nebraska.

Norris offered a resolution to deny Vare a seat just as the Senate was about to take up the tariff bill. The resolution has privileged status and no sooner was it presented than fear was expressed in some quarters that action on the tariff measure might be delayed for some time. Norris is opposed to the tariff bill.

RESOLUTION SURPRISE

The resolution, which was a surprise to the administration leadership, said Vare had recovered from his illness and therefore "no further reason exists for longer delay on the part of the Senate."

It added that a special Senate investigating committee had recommended against the seating of Vare after an inquiry into the Pennsylvanian's expenditures in the three-cornered Republican senatorial primary campaign of 1926.

Vare never has been given the oath of office in the Senate pending a settlement of his case.

WATSON FORCES DELAY

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, forced a day's delay in the Vare case by insisting the Norris resolution go over for one day in accordance with Senate rules.

Norris questioned the authority for this, but did not protest further after saying the resolution then would be a question of the "highest privileged."

Vice President Curtis ruled that there was no question as to the resolution being privileged, indicating he would hold it in order tomorrow.

It was the intention of the Republican leadership to defer settlement of the Vare case along with any other controversial matters until the regular session in December in the hope of driving the tariff bill through to a decision before that time.

REVIEWS CASE

The Norris resolution cited the history of the Vare investigation and recalled that it showed expenditures by the Vare ticket in the 1926 primary campaign of $785,000.

"It appears that the evidence as to fraud and corruption in the primary election has not been refuted," the resolution said, "and the same stands as it did when the committee filed its partial report to the Senate."

STRIKE MURDER TRIAL ENDED

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The trial of 16 Gastonia textile strikers and strike leaders on charges of murder growing out of the death of O. F. Aderholt, came to an abrupt end here today when J. G. Campbell, a juror, became violently insane. Judge M. V. Barnhill declared a mistrial immediately after court convened.

Jailer McGinnis, a half hour after Campbell had been locked up, said that the man was raving on the subject of religion.

The trial which started here August 26, was the second effort to hear the accusations against Fred Erwin Beal, Lawrence, Mass., labor leader; four other National Textile Workers Union and Communist leaders, and eight strikers accused of first degree murder for the death of Aderholt, chief of police of Gastonia.

Three New York women, Amy Schechter, Vera Buch, and Sophie Melvin, were being tried on second degree murder charges along with the men.

Mickey Walker Battles Out of Ring, Jailed

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, was jailed here early today on charges of being drunk and possessing intoxicants.

The boxer and three companions from the motion picture colony were arrested after police had answered protests from the fashionable Whitley Heights districts that a fight was on in an apartment house there. Officers said they found furniture wrecked and doors and windows broken.

Arrested with Walker were Ray Hallor and Arthur Housman, movie actors, and Gordon H. Sweeney, director. Police said they had found Walker and three unidentified men fighting on a canyon road near here early Sunday, but released them when they insisted it was a friendly scuffle.

8 DEAD IN CRASH OF AIR LINER IDENTIFIED

'Accident,' Coroner's Verdict; Other Inquiries Opened Into Cause of Smashup

International News Service.

GALLUP, N. M., Sept. 9.—Bodies of six of the eight victims of the spectacular crash last Tuesday of the T. A. T. air liner City of San Francisco were here today in a morgue.

A difficult all-day task, broken briefly at Grants, N. M., for the formality of a coroner's inquest, ended when the bodies of Pilot Jesse Stowe, co-Pilot Edward Dietel, C. F. Canfield, the courier, the crew, and M. M. Campbell, William Livermore and William H. Beers, passengers, had arrived here by pack train and auto ambulance.

"ACCIDENT" IS VERDICT

The coroner's verdict was "death by airplane accident."

Deputy Coroner McBride at the inquest turned over the trinkets, by which the broken and charred bodies had been identified, to Valencia County sheriffs.

Every body had been fully identified.

The bodies of A. B. McGaffey, Albuquerque lumberman, and Mrs. George Reynolds, daughter of the superintendent of the T. A. T. airport, were sent direct to Albuquerque.

SHIP ONE BODY EAST

The body of William Livermore, banker and shipping man, was to leave tonight for Boston, his home.

Disposition of the other bodies still awaited instructions from relatives early today.

The theory that the city of San Francisco had been struck by lightning before it smashed into the south slope of Mount Taylor, 90 miles by tortuous trail from here, was not considered by the coroner's jury.

Fire which completed the destruction wrought when the palatial trimotored all-metal ship, spurning dense rain clouds and bucking whipping winds, struck the peak, was probably caused by sparks from the ignition system, it was testified.

HAD TURNED BACK

The City of San Francisco had turned back on its Albuquerque-to-Los Angeles course when Pilot Stowe found the storm too strong.

FLO LEEDS WEDS MYSTERIOUSLY

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Florence Lawlor Leeds, former New York Century Roof chorus beauty, and the "other woman" in the James A. Stillman divorce case, has been married here to John Rousseau Metcalfe, it was learned this afternoon.

The marriage took place at the Prince's Row registry office on August 22.

There is much mystery as to the identity of the bridegroom. He was described in the official papers as "a company director."

Metcalfe is believed to be from Los Angeles, Cal., the son of Nathan Louis Metcalfe, a lawyer, now deceased.

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Sept. 9.—Curly Ogden opposed Danny MacFayden on the mound as the Browns met the Red Sox in the first game of a double-header here this afternoon.

The game in detail:

FIRST INNING

ST. LOUIS—Blue doubled to left. Blue took third on McGowan's sacrifice fly to Rothrock. Manush popped to Reeves. Schulte singled to center, scoring Blue. MacFayden tossed out Kress. One run. Two hits.

SECOND INNING

ST. LOUIS—O'Rourke singled to left center. Melillo singled to center, O'Rourke stopping at second. Ferrell took a third strike. Ogden forced Melillo, Gerber to Rhyne. Blue walked, filling the bases. McGowan grounded out to Todt. Two hits.

ROBINS, PIRATES RESUME SERIES

The warfare between the Pirates and Robins will be resumed at Forbes Field this afternoon at 3:30. The two clubs reached Pittsburgh this morning from Brooklyn, where yesterday the boys who uphold the banner of Uncle Robbie scored a hair-line victory over the Freebooters. Dazzy Vance had to have the "breaks" to get a 2 to 1 decision in his strenuous joust with the youthful Larry French.

Heinie Meine or Ervin Brame will have the Pirate slab assignment for this afternoon, and it is likely the Buccos will swing against Ray Moss or Doug McWeeny.

The Pirates and Robins will get through for the season tomorrow afternoon. The next club to reach Oakland will be the Giants, who have serious designs on second place money.

G. O. P. CONTROL AT STAKE

Growing every moment in intensity and bitterness, the most complicated political campaign in the memory of observers here is entering upon its final week.

In addition to revealing the names of the Republican nominees for mayor, controller, council and sheriff, the primary a week from tomorrow will answer two questions of unusual importance from a political standpoint. These are:

Will Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong or Senator Max G. Leslie win the duel they are waging for leadership of the organization?

Will Judge Richard W. Martin be able to smash the defenses of the divided organization and win the mayoralty contest?

TWO REGISTRATION DAYS

If the latter question is answered in the affirmative and the judge, after winning the nomination is elected, he will be the first man not connected with the Republican organization to hold the office in nearly 20 years. Just as the prestige and power of Armstrong or Leslie depends upon the answer to the first question, so the prestige and considerable of the power of the organization depends upon the answer to the second.

There will be two additional reg-

Kline Supporters Accused Of 'Padding' Voting List; Malone Names Held Illegal

The alleged conspiracy to control Pittsburgh's current mayoralty election with an army of phantom voters was subjected to scrutiny today from these three angles:

Judge Harry H. Rowand ordered the grand jury to investigate allegations of counsel for James F. Malone, mayoralty candidate, that 10,000 fraudulent assessments already had been made by supporters of Mayor Charles H. Kline, and that there would be 60,000 such frauds committed before the primaries were ended.

$10,000 FOR INQUIRY

The County Commissioners at a hearing today appropriated $10,000 for an investigation of the scandal and asked the Election Frauds Committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association to carry out the task.

Judge Richard W. Martin's campaign manager, Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, offered $1,000 for the use of any nonpartisan investigating committee that might be formed to uncover irregularities and trace them to their source.

MALONE NAMES HELD

Three fraudulent assessment books containing approximately 7,200 names have been discovered, Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy testified at the hearing before the County Commissioners today.

Tax receipts for nearly 5,000 persons listed in the fradulent books were requested by John J. Johnson, an employe of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell and a worker for Malone for Mayor, he said.

Christy refused to issue these receipts to the Malone worker, he declared, because of a letter from the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes notifying him that the three books are fraudulent.

George J. Schad, chairman of that board, also testified that the three books were fraudulent.

"The blank books must have been taken out of our transcribing office," said Schad. "I don't know who did it or who filled in the

What It Means to Be President

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE

ARTICLE 2.

(This is the second of a series of five articles by Mr. Coolidge on "What It Means to Be President," which will appear in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The third will be published in tomorrow's issue.)

THE Secretary of State is the agency through which the President exercises his constitutional authority to deal with foreign relations. As this subject is a matter of constant interchange, he makes no annual reports to the President on the whole conduct of their departments, which he transmits to the Congress. All the intercourse with foreign governments is carried on through the Secretary of State, and a national of a foreign country could not be received by the President unless the accredited diplomat representative of his government made an appointment for him through the State Department.

All foreign approaches to the President are through this department. When an ambassador or minister is to present his credentials, the under-secretary of state brings him to the White House and escorts him to the Green Room. After the President has taken his position, standing in the Blue Room accompanied by his aides, the diplomat is then brought before him. He presents his letters with a short formal statement, to which the President responds in kind. When the mutual expressions of friendly interests and good will have been exchanged, the accompanying staff of the diplomat is brought in for presentation, after which he retires. Except when foreign officials are presented for an audience in this way, the etiquette of the White House requires that those who are present should remain until the President and the mistress of the White House retire from the room.

Social Affairs Important

A competent man is assigned from the State Department to have the management of the White House official social functions. He has under him a considerable staff located in one of the basement rooms, known as the Social Bureau. They keep a careful list of all those who leave cards and of the officials who should be invited to receptions, which is constantly revised to meet changing conditions. While the President has supervision over all these functions, the most effective way to deal with them is to provide a capable mistress of the White House. I have often been complimented on the choice which I made nearly 25 years ago. These functions were so much in the hands of Mrs. Coolidge that oftentimes I did not know what guests were to be present until I met them in the Blue Room just before going in to dinner.

These social functions are almost as much a part of the life of official Washington as a session of the Congress or a term of the Supreme Court. The season opens with the cabinet dinner. Following this come the diplomatic reception, the diplomatic dinner, then the judicial reception, the Supreme Court dinner, then the congressional reception and the Speaker's dinner, with the last reception of the year tendered to the Army and Navy. About 50 guests assemble at the dinners, except that given to the diplomats, when the presence of the ambassadors or ministers of each country represented in Washington, together with their wives, brings the number up to about 90. The Marine Band is in attendance on all these occasions. Following the dinners a short musical recital by famous artists is given in the East Room, to which many additional guests are invited.

Receptions Colorful

A reception is a particularly colorful event. About 3,500 invitations are issued. When the guests are assembled, the President and his wife, preceded by his aides and followed by the cabinet and his secretary and their wives, go down the main staircase, pausing for a moment to receive the military salute of the band, and then pass to the Blue Room, where the receptions are always held. When the foreign diplomats are present in their official dress, the scene is very brilliant. After all the presentations have been made, the President and his retinue return to the second floor. Immediately after thi there is dancing in the

Many Women Cast Votes In Mayoralty Poll

Women voters of the city are taking a deep interest in the mayoralty straw vote poll of Pittsburgh conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Of 5,045 ballots cast in the poll, 1,706 have been cast by women, better than one-half of the 3,339 votes cast by men.

The latest count of ballots gives Mayor Charles H. Kline an additional advantage over Judge Richard W. Martin and President of Council James F. Malone and results in this standing for the candidates in the poll:

Kline	1,960
Martin	1,820
Malone	1,265

The tabulation of ballots for the day gives the following results:

Kline 182, 122 men and 60 women; Martin 139, 81 men and 58 women; Malone 77, 50 men and 27 women.

Mayor Kline was given strong support for the day in the returns from the Fourth, Twelfth, Seventeenth, Twenty-first and Twenty-third wards, with Judge Martin and Councilman Malone also receiving aid in those wards.

The latest tabulation of all votes cast from the First Ward, which is regarded in political circles as a battleground of organization strength, produces these totals: Kline 77, 49 men and 28 women; Malone 32, 25 men and 7 women; Martin 28, 25 men and 3 women.

Distribution of ballots to all wards of the city is completed today by the mailing of cards to districts to which the canvass has not been extended.

DRY DEPUTY HELD IN SLAYING OF BOY SCHOOL ATHLETE

FATAL SHOT ACCIDENT, HE SAYS

Raider Faces First-Degree Murder Charge; Found Whisky on Farm, Claim

ASHLAND, Ala., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Deputy Sheriff Cecil Guthrie was being held here today on a first-degree murder charge for the death of Clarence Bailey, 18, Ashland high school football star, who was shot to death as Guthrie sought to arrest him on liquor charges.

Bailey, the son of a Clay County planter, received a bullet wound through the head during what officers said was his flight through a pasture about five miles from the Bailey farm near here.

"ACCIDENTAL"

Guthrie, committed to jail shortly after the shooting, told authorities the fatal shot was accidental. He said he fired two shots in the air as he pursued Bailey and that he stumbled, discharging his pistol the third time. It was this last shot, he said, which struck the fleeing youth.

The deputy sheriff, W. Z. Alexander, chief of police of Ashland, was patroling the road in the vicinity where the shooting occurred, when his attention was directed to shouts coming from the pasture.

FIND WHISKY

The officers said they saw several boys who fled as they approached. Guthrie told Sheriff J. H. Allen he saw Bailey stoop and pick up a gallon jug. It was then he fired, he said.

The jug, when recovered, contained about one-half gallon of whisky, the officer said.

Bailey played last year on the freshman football team and was to have made his first appearance on the varsity team in the first game of the 1929 season. He was considered one of the outstanding prep school guards of the state.

2nd RUM SUSPECT SLAIN

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—J. D. Ellsworth, 30, died here today from a wound in his chest, received last night near Howard, Kan., at the hands of Sheriff W. P. Brown, of Elk County, who said Ellsworth resisted arrest when he and two other officers halted Ellsworth's motor car on suspicion he was running whisky. Fifteen gallons of liquor were found in Ellsworth's motor car, Sheriff Brown said. He declared the man had reached for a gun when he was stopped by the officers.

HUSTON NAMED G. O. P. CHIEF

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Claudius H. Huston, of Tennessee, was elected chairman of the Republican National Committee today, succeeding Dr. Hubert Work, of Colorado, who retired on his own motion.

The committee selected James Francis Burke, of Pittsburgh, general counsel, as a member of the executive committee of the National Committee.

As Dr. Work turned over administration of the committee to Huston, a message was read to the gathering from President Hoover, the titular head of the party. It was addressed to Ralph Williams, first vice chairman.

"I should like through you," the President wrote, "to place in the record of the National Committee the high appreciation I hold, and which I know the country generally holds for the many public services given by Dr. Work."

In accepting the chairmanship, to which he was elected by unanimous vote and without opposition, Mr. Huston announced he was severing all his active business connections as chairman of the board of the Transcontinental Oil Company; president of the Brotherhood Management Corporation, in charge of the financial affairs of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and chairman of the board of the Associated Bond and Share Corporation of New York.

"My program as chairman will be that of seeking to build up with your help and that of all other Republican workers throughout the country," he said, "an organization which will insure full expression of that public opinion which stands with and by the Republican party and the administration program."

BANKS BATTLE FOR BONDS

TELLURIDE, Col., Sept. 9.—(INS.)—With $200,000 securities at stake, representatives of various interests involved in the one-half million dollar fraud scheme allegedly engineered by C. D. Waggoner, missing president, will match wits today in an effort to obtain them for their clients.

The securities represent collateral on loans which Waggoner paid off with a portion of the $500,000 placed to the credit of his bank in the Chase National Bank of New York after six New York banks had received fake telegrams from Denver requesting them to deposit amounts ranging from $75,000 to $100,000 for the Bank of Telluride.

SECURITIES ON WAY

The legal battle will open with the arrival here of a train already delayed by track washouts. The package containing the securities is addressed to the Bank of Telluride.

D. M. Hughes, Montrose, Col., attorney, who represents several New York institutions, will, through the sheriff's office, attempt to gain custody of the fortune. Grant McFerson, state banking commissioner, on the other hand, has declared he will take any steps necessary to protect the Bank of Telluride and retain for its benefit any funds that Waggoner had deposited to its credit.

STATE TAKES CHARGE

Four state bank examiners, working under McFerson, have taken charge of the affairs of the bank here and the missing man's institution at Norwood, Col., the Bank of Norwood.

Waggoner, who for several days apparently took no precautions to conceal his identity and traveled through Nebraska with his wife, Mrs. Mary Waggoner, is still missing. Delos Waggoner, his son, and his wife also have disappeared and are being sought by authorities.

istration days in Pittsburgh this week—one tomorrow and the last on Saturday. All groups are strenuously endeavoring to get their adherents qualified.

PLAN MANY MEETINGS

The various candidates will carry their appeals to the voters at scores of meetings and in many radio addresses. Mayor Charles H. Kline will speak over WJAS at 10:30 o'clock tonight. Judge Martin, speaking at 7:15 tonight over KDKA, will take the subject, "The Case of the People of the City of Pittsburgh Against Mayor Charles H. Kline," and proposes to call witnesses to support his contentions.

The organization of a Winters campaign committee of 100 members, with George J. Kambach as chairman, and headquarters at 432 Fifth avenue, was announced today. Other officers are Charles G. Lane, Jr., and Mary M. Bayer, vice chairmen; Alexander Cooper, secretary, and Paul J. Bleichner, treasurer.

Controller Henry Oliver Evans, who is opposed by Daniel Winters, in a noon speech today charged his opponent with "shadow boxing." His own private affairs are not an issue, Evans declared, the only question being if he has done his duty in the Controller's office.

MORE CHARGES

He charged that Bert L. Succop, city director of supplies, a friend of Winters, was prevented by the present controller from awarding contracts with as high as 17 per cent overcharge to favored bidders. He charged further that Winters knew in 1925 that there were overcharges by the American Reduction Company, but did nothing about it.

Both Kline and Martin were assailed by Attorney Harold Obenauer, speaking today at the Malone headquarters.

Officers of the Supreme Lodge of the Slavonic Citizens' League have indorsed Mayor Kline for reelection. The resolution will be handed the Mayor today by a committee headed by Joseph P. Kurcina, president of the league, and Kerwin Flannery.

RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

Economy Lodge No. 48, Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has unanimously indorsed Judge Martin, according to an announcement by Jacob Yeager.

The Rev. A. V. B. Hightower, councilmanic candidate, issued a statement urging an adequate subway, adequate sewerage facilities for the Soho and Center avenue districts, modification of the zoning laws, equitable distribution of street improvement appropriations, reliable street car schedules, extension of the traffic control system and a working regulation to control the speed of automobiles.

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Five bandits yesterday captured excursionists near Trikala and are holding them. Among them was Senator Hadjigakis.

It was said here the bandits were holding the group for 4,000,000 drachmae ranson (about $52,000).

Wife Puts Kline Poster In Window, Mate Beats Her

Mayor Charles H. Kline and Councilman James F. Malone's mayoralty fight reached a domestic anti-climax in Morals Court today when Mrs. Anna Stillwagen, 910 East Diamond street, North Side, preferred charges of disorderly conduct against her husband, Victor.

She alleges he beat her for having a "Kline for Mayor" sign in the window of their home.

Stillwagen is a rigid Malone adherent.

After hearing the testimony Magistrate A. D. Brandon advised both to "control their tempers," and referred the case to social workers.

DEAD IDENTIFIED IN FATAL T. A. T. LINER CRASH

The metal parts of the wings and fuselage cabin were strung along 300 yards of the Rocky Mountain slope.

Discovery of the wreck came Saturday when Pilot George Rice, in a Western Air Express passenger plane, with two crew aides and four men passengers, flew over Mount Taylor, circled the wreckage thrice and sped on to Albuquerque to flash to Los Angeles word that terminated a five-day hunt over the wilds of Arizona and New Mexico.

Search parties then were formed at cattle ranches, small Santa Fe stations and by air.

OTHER INQUIRIES

T. A. T. and other airplanes gathered over the mountain like soaring eagles, while keen eyes and telephoto cameras sought to determine the facts from the air. No landing could be made within 120 miles of the peak.

The first to reach the wreck were members of a search party from a government survey camp on a shoulder of the mountain, 11 miles from the debris.

While the coroner's inquest was regarded as closed with the return of a verdict at the little railway station of Grants late last night, other inquiries were only starting.

The most serious passenger plane crash in the history of the Southwestern Aviation was to be probed thoroughly by the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Aeronautics.

Maj. Clarence M. Young, commissioner of aviation of the government, had arrived by air at Albuquerque, Pacific Coast manufacturers of the T. A. T., to pursue the investigation.

R. J. Hazen, inspector of the bureau, was on Mt. Taylor soon after the first searching party had reached the wreck. He refused to comment pending collection of more data.

It was the opinion of Rice and other airmen, who had studied the wreckage from the air and had known of the storm conditions Tuesday, that the wrecked liner had been hurled against the peak by a side wind.

"SHIP COULDN'T CLIMB"

A scant 500 feet more of altitude would have saved the liner, Rice said. But the plane, he thought, had been bucking such winds that it could not climb the distance needed to allow it to cross a shoulder of the highest peak in western New Mexico.

The motors of the plane were literally disintegrated and some parts of the metal had been melted by the terrific heat of an explosion and the burning of several hundred gallons of hightest gasoline.

REPORT TO WASHINGTON

GRANTS, N. M., Sept. 9.—(INS.)—R. J. Hazen, Department of Aeronautics Inspector, today telegraphed a report of his findings in the wreck of the T. A. T. air liner, City of San Francisco, to Washington.

No intimation was given by Hazen of the contents of the report.

Official announcement will be made of the findings by the Department of Commerce, Hazen said.

Three newspaper correspondents who had visited the scene of the wreck on Mount Taylor, 30 miles north of here Saturday, had been missing last night, it was reported here.

BANKERS' CLERK GETS HEARING

Wilson B. Smith, young bank clerk, who strolled out of the Oakland Savings and Trust Company, August 15, with more than $45,000 in securities and travelers checks with a face value of $60,000, it is alleged, had a preliminary hearing in Central Police Court today. He was remanded to jail.

According to City Detective Thomas Morgan, who brought Smith back from New York, he admitted he was $4,000 short and decided to make away with a large sum when examiners began work on his accounts.

En route to New York, Smith wrecked his car in New Jersey, but he was uninjured. He had wanted to go to Mexico, he said, but changed his plans.

Mite Wife Saves Husband From Burning Auto

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Exerting almost superhuman effort, a 21-year-old wife, weighing only 110 pounds, today pulled her 150-pound husband from the flaming wreckage of his automobile after it skidded into the ditch north of Willow Grove on the Hatboro pike.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Van Loon, of Hatboro, were riding in their coupe when it left the road. Van Loon was pinned beneath the machine as it burst into flames from ignited gasoline.

Tugging at her unconscious husband, Mrs. Van Loon managed to drag him from beneath the machine, and then fainted.

Portes Gil Sees Football Game, Becomes Fan

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Portes Gil, president of Mexico, saw his first game of intercollegiate football and had become an ardent enthusiast after sitting through the whole game and seeing the University of Mexico team, coached by Reginald Root, formerly of Yale, defeat Deportivo, last year's champions of Mexico, 19 to 6.

"This is tremendous," said the president as he watched the university eleven reel off a number of exciting plays.

The president, his wife and Marte Gomez, minister of agriculture, came to the game as guests of the university and occupied a gayly decorated box in the center of the great stadium in which he was inaugurated last November.

POWERS FAVOR UNITED EUROPE

GENEVA, Sept. 9. — (AP.) — A conference of the leaders of European states, meeting after luncheon under the chairmanship of Premier Briand, of France, this afternoon decided that it was wise to create ties of solidarity among themselves such as might be described as a European confederation, or "United States of Europe."

The statesmen, representatives of their nations at the tenth assembly of the League of Nations, appointed Premier Briand, who is the author of the project for the so-called "United States of Europe," to draft a memorandum on the subject. The memorandum will be sent to all European governments for study.

CONFERENCE LIKELY

Upon receipt of the replies from the different governments, Premier Briand will make a new report incorporating them and submit it to a new conference of European nations. This conference will probably be called to take place simultaneously with a League assembly at Geneva next year.

Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, in a speech before the assembly of the League of Nations today, came out strongly in support of Premier Briand's project.

Dr. Stresemann made clear, however, his support was contingent upon such an organization's being in no manner directed against the United States of America. He declared his belief the confederation should be economic in character and not political.

RESTRICTS SCOPE

But even an economic union was restricted by him with his comment, "I am against creating an economic oligarchy in Europe," making what was interpreted as an allusion to the United States of America.

He added with vigor: "I do not believe in forming a group which would be directed against any other group."

avenue apartment in New York City.

Miss Lawlor gave her age as 32. She said she was the daughter of James Stanley Lawlor, of New York, who is of independent means.

McAfee is described as "a fashionable London bootmaker."

The nuptials were planned and carried out so quietly that it was not until today that they were verified.

INCOME FROM STILLMAN

Miss Lawlor is the mother of 11-year-old Jay Leeds. She has always maintained that Stillman is the father of the child.

Her threats of legal action led the banker to settle $1,500 monthly upon the mother. He also advanced a sum of $80,000 as a trust fund for the living expenses and education of Jay. The boy is being educated in Europe.

The titian-haired beauty is said to have caught the eye of the middle aged New York banker—he was then head of the National City Bank—in 1916 while she was appearing nightly upon the Century roof.

ADMITTED AFFAIR

The alleged relations between the dancer and the banker received much newspaper attention when Mrs. Stillman sued for divorce.

"Miss Leeds," as she was then known, disappeared. Later she is said to have been found in Florida. She admitted her affair with the banker, claiming she did not know he was married.

For the past few years Miss Lawlor, or "Miss Leeds," has spent most of her time in Europe, although she maintained a New York partment. She is wealthy.

THIRD INNING

ST. LOUIS—Manush popped to Reeves. Gerber whipped out Schulte. Kress lifted to Rothrock.

FOURTH INNING

ST. LOUIS—Rhyne threw out O'Rourke. Melillo hit to Todt and when MacFayden failed to touch first, which he was covering, Melillo was safe. Ferrell hit to Reeves, who threw to right field, Melillo taking third and Ferrell holding first. On a squeeze play, Ogden bunted safely, Melillo scoring and Ferrell stopping at second. Blue forced Ogden, Gerber to Rhyne. On an attempted double steal, Ferrell was out at the plate, MacFayden to Gerber to A. Gaston. One run. One hit.

BOSTON—Rothrock singled to center. Bigelow flied deep to McGowan. Gerber singled to center, sending Rothrock to third. Todt fouled to Ferrell, and when Ferrell made a low throw to second trying for Gerber, who started after the catch, Rothrock scored. O'Rourke threw out A. Gaston. One run. Two hits. One error.

TWO GIRLS JAILED IN PANTAGES WITNESS BRIBE EXPOSE

ONE ACCUSED OF HURLING KNIFE

Actress and Sister Charged With Offer of $25,000 to Man to Alter Attack Story

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—What is perhaps the most sensational development in the charges pending against Alexander T. Pantages, millionaire theater owner, came today following the arrest of Nancy Lee, 25, sculptress and actress, and Janice Hill, her sister, 19.

The two sisters were taken into custody yesterday in a carefully planned raid on an apartment by District Attorney Buron Fitts and three detective lieutenants of the Hollywood police station.

Both girls are being held today in the County Jail under $25,000 bail, Miss Lee charged with suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, and her sister detained as a material witness.

OFFICIALS WARNED

The arrests, according to Fitts, were the result of a sensational report brought to him several days ago by the manager of the Insley Drive apartment into which the two sisters moved one week ago. Knowing that several important state's witnesses against Pantages were tenants in her apartment house, the manager, who is also a state's witness in the Pantages case, warned Fitts that an attempt was being made to get acquainted with one of the witnesses, a man.

Fitts told the manager to await further developments, it was disclosed. Saturday morning the apartment manager and the man witness reported finding a note under his door which read:

"If you will testify that the Pringle girl bruised herself, there might be $25,000 in it for you."

DENY "PLANT"

Both girls flatly denied that they had been "planted" in the apartment house for the purpose of approaching men witnesses in the Pantages case when questioned by Fitts and the Hollywood officers.

Fitts then produced the note and asked Miss Lee to copy it. She did so, and Fitts then ordered the detectives to arrest both girls. To guard them while they dressed, Fitts asked the apartment manager to stay with them in their bedroom.

Then, it is charged by the landlady, that Miss Lee snatched up a butcher knife from the kitchen and started toward her.

The woman screamed and the detectives rushed to her assistance, just as a bottle was hurled at her head.

After being finger printed at police headquarters, the sisters were taken to the county jail. Both refused to discuss the case last night.

ARABS ACCUSED OF DEATH PLOT BY POISONING

Woman Made Ill by Grapes, Moslem Merchant Held; Holy Land Still Uneasy

JERUSALEM, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Instances of the alleged sale of poisoned fruit to Jews by Arabs have been reported to police here.

One Arab merchant has been arrested in Jaffa on this charge. The grapes he sold to a Jewish dealer at Telaviv, which are alleged to have made a Jewish woman purchaser ill, have been sent to the Jaffa health department for examination. Similar cases are reported here.

Among the latest instances continuing the uneasiness between the two communities is that of a Jewish policeman, walking with an Arab colleague outside Haifa, being attacked by an Arab band and seriously wounded.

Troops have confiscated stores of rifles from Bedouin tribesmen near Jericho. Twenty-two arrests have been made at Tulkarem, seven at Nablus, 60 at Bessan and several at Jaffa. All these places are important Arab centers.

BOTH DENY BLAME

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Bitter exchange of words replaced fighting in Palestine today, as the situation throughout the Holy Land was reported generally quiet for the third day in succession.

With the exception of a general boycott by both Jews and Arabs, nearly normal conditions now prevail. There remains considerable tension, however, but dispatches from Jerusalem indicate that the worst of the serious interracial rioting is now past.

Prominent leaders of both faiths have taken outspoken stands in defense of their actions in the recent outbreaks. Amin El Hussein, grand mufti of Jerusalem and president of the Moslem supreme council, has made a lengthy statement alleging that the first shot in the outbreak was fired by the Jews, a Jerusalem dispatch to the Daily Mail declares.

RABBI DENIES CHARGE

Rabbi Chaim Sonnenfeld, a resident of Palestine for more than 40 years, has quickly denied this charge, the dispatch continues.

The grand mufti stated he was convinced that an unbiased inquiry would show the Jews responsible for the outbreaks.

"Jewish ambition and greed," the Moslem leader declared, "were deliberately responsible for provoking the Arabs' attack in order to gain the support of the whole world for reopening the question of the wailing wall.

"The disturbances which led to great loss of life and property in Jerusalem and other Palestine centers were caused by the mistaken notion of a Jerusalem Jew who, in panic or deliberately, provoked the Arab attack by firing a revolver or throwing a bomb when he saw a large number with the usual Moslem sense of display, bearing swords, daggers and sticks when leaving the Mosque of Omar."

ASK PUNISHMENT

Rabbi Sonnenfeld, an aged scholar who is one of the most revered and respected Jews in Palestine, lost no time in answering these charges on behalf of his people.

"I am disappointed," he said, "that after the continuous promises of the government that nothing would happen, on which promises the Jews of Palestine relied, that the horrible and unprecedented attacks occurred in Jerusalem and throughout Palestine.

"We do not demand revenge, but we do insist that the severest punishment be meted out to the perpetrators of the recent crimes."

TWO WOUNDED

CAIRO, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Uneasiness prevails in Jerusalem as the result of two hand-to-hand encounters between Arabs and Jews near the Wailing Wall. A Jew shot and wounded an Arab, it is reported, and soon afterward a Moslem stabbed a Jew in the shadow of the Wailing Wall.

The second eye-witness account of the disorders in Palestine, as written by Dr. S. Margoshes, Jewish editor, is on page six.

ADVENTURER TO LIVE AS CAVE MAN

Hopes to Prove Civilization Has Not Destroyed Human Resourcefulness and Vigor

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Wearing nothing but a pair of spectacles and carrying no equipment whatever, Burt M. McConnell, a large plump, serious man, will plunge alone Wednesday into the uninhabited wilds of Northwestern New Brunswick for a three months' stay.

McCannell leaves today for Fredericton, N. B., whence he will go to a place called Plaster Rock and dive into the woods to prove the ability of the modern city man to subjugate nature.

McConnell plans to light his fires by rubbing sticks of wood like the Boy Scouts do; fashion weapons from sticks and stone and stalk wild animals to furnish pelts for shoes and clothing.

STEFANSSON'S AID

McConnell is not merely a rash adventurer. He has had opportunity to contemplate the difficulties of his present exploit. He was an assistant to Stefansson on his Canadian Arctic expedition and took part in the rescue of the Karluk survivors from Wrangel Island, Siberia, in 1914.

At present he is a magazine editor and writer in New York. He has engaged in no preliminary training for the hardships he will encounter and believes there are many men of equal courage, endurance and native resourcefulness who could do the same thing.

McConnell's reputation is such that there will be little doubt of his integrity in carrying out his expedition in strict accordance with the conditions he has imposed.

SOLITARY EXILE

To anticipate any skeptic he has selected a committee to choose the location in which he is to be a solitary exile and to see that he makes his exit from civilization without so much as a shoe string concealed about him.

Speaking of equipment, McConnell said today:

"If I could have but one small utensil I should choose a needle. That one implement would probably save me days of worry. I suppose I might hide a needle in my cheek—but that would merely mean cheating myself. If I were to take a needle the whole purpose of the undertaking would fail at the start.

NOT EVEN FISH-HOOK

"A single fish-hook might give me a tremendous start in getting under way. My first problem will be clothing and food. I put clothing first because a man who is not a weather-beaten savage must have some sort of protection in order to hunt his food."

McConnell hopes to go much further than show that he is capable of sustaining life with no other aid than the use of hands and feet. He believes that by Thanksgiving he will be living quite as comfortably as any hermit on a vacation in the big woods.

McConnell has considered his program carefully. Where a man lost in the woods might begin to worry about his next meal, McConnell says his food supply is a secondary consideration. He has fasted for two weeks without noticeable loss of strength, and if he does not catch a rabbit or a grouse the first day he will wait patiently until he has built traps.

BLUE-GRAY UNIT IDEA STIRS G.A.R.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Thomas J. Smith, commander of the department of Nebraska, today told why he opposed the proposed reunion of soldiers who fought on both sides in the Civil War.

He said no formal proposal for such a reunion had been made by veterans of the Confederacy and added that he felt they should be the prime movers in such a matter.

E. H. Pitcher, commander of the department of Maryland, sons of Union veterans, has announced that he would submit a resolution looking toward such a joining.

QUESTION OVER FLAG

"If it were all settled," Commander Smith said, "the one big obstacle would be that the men of the South would probably want the flag of the Confederacy in the parade. I'll never march behind any other flag than the Stars and Strips and I think most of the comrades feel the same way about it."

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic today continued to assemble for their sixty-third National encampment which officially opens Wednesday with a parade.

Hotel lobbies took on the appearance of a political convention as friends of James E. Jewell, of Fort Morgan, Colo., and Silas Towler, of Minneapolis, candidates for the post of commander-in-chief now held by John Reese, of Broken Bow, Neb., talked with the delegates.

'98 VETS GATHERING

DENVER, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Brass bands blared "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" as the boys of '98, veterans of the Spanish-American War, assembled in hotels today.

The veterans assembled to officially open the thirty-first annual national encampment.

Nominations of officers for the auxiliary and the veterans' organization will be opened tomorrow and the two annual elections will be held Wednesday.

The contest for national commander lies between Fred W. Green, of Michigan, and Winfield Scott, of Oklahoma.

RUSSIAN TROOPS FIRE TOWN

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—A Pogranichnaya - Harbin passenger train on the Chinese Eastern Railway is reported to have been bombed and blown up by Soviet Russians near Pogranichnaya, with loss of two lives, according to word from Japanese sources published by evening newspapers today.

Three other persons on the train were reported wounded.

The official news agency of the Nationalist government at Shanghai tonight stated that the heaviest fighting yet to occur in the Manchurian dispute between Russia and China, was going on along "the entire Manchurian-Siberian frontier."

Pogranichnaya was reported in flames following an attack upon the city by Soviet troops.

Reports from Harbin state five Soviet planes bombed Pogranichnaya, wounding 30 Chinese soldiers, destroying the railway station and reducing residents to a state of panic.

Scores of casualties are reported to have taken place in renewed fighting between Soviet and Chinese troops along the Manchurian border.

A Mukden message to the London Times states that detachments of Soviet artillery attacked the Manchuli and Pogranichnaya fronts Saturday, withdrawing at dusk owing to the intensity of machine gun fire from the Chinese.

The Chinese lines between Delaninor and Manchuli were heavily shelled and assaulted by cavalry without success.

NEW SYNAGOGUE DEDICATED

Following a huge automobile parade from the old edifice on Crawford street to the new one at Shady and Tilbury avenue, the Poale Zedek congregation's new synagogue was dedicated yesterday.

Adolph Edlis, Max Friedman, Leo Ferber, Maurice Firestone, Sam Schoenberger and Murray Edlis composed the dedication committee. City and county officials, including Mayor Charles H. Kline, James F. Malone, Council president; Peter P. Walsh, superintendent of police, and others took part in the ceremonies.

Rabbi Sol B. Friedman, spiritual leader of the congregation, officiated. Thousands of persons jammed the building and the approach, necessitating the use of loud speakers to convey the messages of those making addresses.

The new building consists of a sub-basement, main basement and the temple proper, which will seat 1,000 persons. The structure is 60 by 93 feet.

STRIKERS, CITY FAIL TO AGREE

All building construction work being done by the city is tied up today, because of a general strike called against the city of Pittsburgh.

Edward F. Welsh, representative of the Building Trades Council and William J. Kelly, representing the Carpenters' District Council, said that neither the city nor the contractors doing city work on about 10 different jobs had made any overtures looking towards a settlement, and that the 150 men who are out will remain off the city work until the controversy is adjusted.

Both Welsh and Kelly reiterated their previous statements that some of the contractors doing city work have been paying less than the union scale by bringing in nonresident employes, thus supplanting residents of Pittsburgh.

Seventeen men are out at the City Home project. All work has been completed there except the main kitchen and cafeteria. Dr. J. S. Hammers said the strike is not causing any hardship, as the present equipment is taking care of the meals.

WRECK MALONE HEADQUARTERS

Hoodlums battered in windows of the Malone-for-Mayor Oakland headquarters at 3621 Fifth avenue, early today, and ripped down two banners strung across the street.

Posters, bearing Malone's likeness, had been torn down some time ago. Then his picture was painted on the window and it was to remove the painted picture that the windows were broken.

Mrs. Nick Ali, living above the headquarters, thought her home had been bombed when she heard repeated crashes at 2:30 a. m. Going downstairs, she found three pieces of heavy timber had been hurled through the windows. Oakland police began an investigation.

165 LOST AS 2 SHIPS SINK

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—A wave of tragedy and disaster has swept down over European shipping during the last 48 hours. Total casualties in two of the four maritime disasters were estimated at about 165, many of the victims being children.

The Finnish steamship Kuru sank off Tammersfors, Finland, while carrying 150 passengers, many of them school children.

A dispatch from Helsingfors said that between 80 and 100 bodies had been washed ashore, but previous estimates of the dead and missing stood at 150.

15 FEARED DEAD

It is feared that 15 persons perished when fire swept the British oil tank ship Vimeira off the Dutch coast.

The Nelson liner Highland Pride grounded near Vigo, Spain, but, according to late advices from Vigo, the passengers, numbering 60 or more, and the crew were rescued. The Highland Pride was reported to have sunk after being pounded by high seas for hours.

The Swedish steamship Heimdall, with 40 passengers and 30 seamen, sank off Ostana, near Stockholm, but all aboard were rescued in small boats.

GERMAN TANKER AFIRE

NORTHFORELAND, England, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Wireless messages here report a German oil tanker afire in the North Sea near the Straits of Dover and in danger of explosion. The American steamer Brush wirelessed it passed the burning vessel, whose crew was standing by in a launch not asking for assistance.

HIT-RUN PLANE SUSPECT HELD

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Henry Ramsdell was held today on a technical charge of manslaughter in connection with an accident in which an airplane struck a motor boat in Jamaica Bay, killing one of the boat's occupants and injuring the other.

Ramsdell was the second pilot in two days to be held here on homicide charges, William H. Alexander having been arraigned yesterday after his plane landed among bathers at Coney Island, killing two and injuring 10. Both Ramsdell and Alexander are employed by Coastal Airways.

William Brown was killed and John Dee injured when a seaplane practically cut their motorboat in two and then continued on its course, the first hit-and-fly plane in police records. Ramsdell was picked up later but asserted that damage to a pontoon of his plane had been caused by his striking a log and not a boat.

Steam Cloud Kills Steel Plant Worker

Caught in a cloud of steam at the cooling dump of the Isabella plant of the Carnegie Steel Company early yesterday, Fred Hundty, 22, of 232 Parker street, suffered burns which caused his death a few hours later in St. Francis Hospital.

The hot cinders are dumped in a heap and water turned on to cool them. Hundty was passing the dump when the water was turned on and was caught in the steam.

SECOND SUNDAY SON, WIFE PART

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Another branch of the family of Billy Sunday, the famed evangelist, has disintegrated.

Yesterday, close on the heels of the filing last week of the divorce of Mrs. Billy Sunday, Jr., against the preacher's son, there came the news that the George Sundays have separated.

George Sunday, eldest son of the evangelist, and his wife, Harriett, who have been married some 15 years, are living apart, it was admitted by the wife. She, with their two sons—aged 13 and 11—is occupying the Sunday home here while George Sunday, head of a big real estate firm, is making his home with the third Sunday brother, Paul.

And even more startling was the announcement by Mrs. George Sunday that she is preparing to file suit against the stockholders of her husband's real estate company—George Sunday, Inc.—for an allowance of $1,250 a month. Whether divorce papers will be filed later, Mrs. Sunday "was not prepared to say."

Women Teachers Blamed For Unthinking Youth

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Sept. 9.—(INS.)—That the youth of today was unable to think "because they had been trained exclusively by women," was the newest bombshell tossed into educational circles today by Prof. Robert T. Rogers, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The technology English professor made his statements at the closing of a business conference here which included a number of women teachers and clergymen.

"For a half century now the largest part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers," Rogers said. "The faults I have been speaking of are the faults of women teachers; preoccupation with method, interest in details, disinclination for mathematical and political and philosophical thinking, an inclination to insist on abstract beliefs to be accepted docilely, rather than the free give and take of criticism.

"Fifty years of this has produced a people incompetent to think politically and philosophically. For whatever may be the case with girls, boys heed men teachers long before the age of 17 or 18. They need them at the beginning of adolescence. Our American thinking is feminine thinking, inculcated by women teachers, highly competent in detail."

Speaking of manners, he said:

"We are a bad-mannered people. We have carried the doctrine of equality so far that we are unnecessarily loud-mouthed, disrespectful, back-slapping and wise-cracking, razzing with inferiors, equals and superiors alike."

Spinster's Suit Reveals Platonic Love Idyll

International News Service.

CAMDEN, N. J. Sept. 9.—A happiness that endured for 20 years, during which time a couple lived in the same house, confessing their love but living platonically and refusing to marry, was revealed today in a $20,000 suit to be filed in Common Pleas Court here.

The bill was to ask $20,000 for "care, nursing and services" from the estate of Charles A. Smith, wealthy merchant, who died intestate in June. It was to be filed on behalf of Miss Margaret C. Meves, 70.

In the Meves home, an aristocratic old building scorning the modern atmosphere of telephones, electric lights and conveniences, the quiet spintress today revealed her "romance."

"As a young man, Mr. Smith had taken a vow against marriage," Miss Meves explained. "He didn't marry and neither did I. We were ideally happy without it. He confessed his love for me often, but said we would continue as we were. As for me, I could have loved no brother or husband more than I did him."

According to the bill, Smith lived at the Meves home, as a brother to the woman he loved and as a son to her mother, for 20 years.

WORLD'S 'DOPE' PROBLEM UP AT GENEVA

Decade of Pious Utterances Fails to Bring Action by League to Curb Traffic

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

GENEVA, Sept. 9.—Having devoted six days to a most ambitious window dressing by its foremost salesmen, the decennial assembly of the League of Nations begins this week to grapple with its real problems.

Right at the top of the list stands the question of the growing traffic in narcotics throughout the world, which in the eyes of many constitutes the blackest mark against the league's record in the field of humanitarian endeavor.

For here, in spite of a decade crowded with pious utterance, the simple fact remains that reports indicating an alarming prevalence of narcotic traffic parallel the consistent refusal of representatives of the great drug producing nations of the Old World to grapple with realities. The most outstanding of these realities is the generally admitted fact that the solution of the problem is impossible as long as unrestricted production in Europe and the Far East permits producers to flood the markets with supplies thousands of per cent above the legitimate medicinial and scientific requirements.

ENVOYS PRATTLE

Yet representatives of the producing nations continue to prattle about control although they have constantly before them the opinions of their own experts that as long as overproduction continues unrestricted, narcotics are certain to find their way into illegitimate channels, carrying with them death and worse to victims throughout the world.

Spokesmen of Italy, China and Latin America are expected to lead the attack which is certain to shatter the atmosphere of self-complacency which permeates Geneva as a result of the self-righteous verbosity of the week just ended.

The United States—always in the forefront of the international anti-narcotic movement—repeatedly has manifested dissatisfaction at Geneva's evasion of the issue, even to the extent of the American delegation headed by Congressman Stephen G. Porter withdrawing in disgust from the league's narcotic conference four years ago.

Hence those demanding effective action are counting on the sympathetic moral support of America to strengthen their hand. Like the United States, these countries are being flooded by narcotics produced in lands where governments have failed signally to fulfill their obligations under existing treaties to limit the output to legitimate medical and scientific needs.

AWAIT TURN OF TIDE

Just when the present tide will turn from verbose platitudes to hard realities cannot be exactly forecast.

It must be admitted that Premier Briand took first place for France—but that was to be expected before a gathering composed largely of diplomats accredited to Paris.

Only once spoke the still small voice of conscience, and that was through the lips of M. Voldemaras, of Lithuania, who declared frankly:

"We have moved rather faster than the league. In Eastern Europe, the continent's trouble zone, nothing is settled."

The Lithuanian statesman concludes his speech with:

"Other speakers have expressed their faith in the league. When I was a child and learned my catechism, I was told that faith, without work, was of little avail. It is work as well as faith that we require in this League of Nations."

What It Means to be President

By CALVIN COOLIDGE

East Room to furnish entertainment while the long line of cars comes up to take the guests home.

Whenever the prominent officials of foreign governments visit Washington, it is customary to receive them at a luncheon or dinner at the White House. When the Prince of Wales was here in 1924, we were in mourning, because of the loss of our son, so that he had luncheon with us informally without any other invited guests. When the Queen of Rumania came to Washington, she was entertained at dinner. There have also been princes of the reigning houses of Japan and of Sweden, the Premier of France, the Governor General of Canada, the presidents of the Irish Free State, of Cuba and of Mexico, who have been received and entertained in some manner. Whenever an official gathering of foreigners like the Panama conference convenes in Washington the President and the mistress of the White House tender them a reception and a dinner.

Besides these formal social gatherings there were various afternoon teas and musicales, which I sometimes neglected, and usually one or two garden parties held in the south grounds, one of which was for the disabled veterans who were patients in Washington hospitals. These were accompanied with band music and light refreshments, which always seemed to be appreciated by the veterans.

Social Invitations Refused

My personal social functions consisted of the White House breakfasts, which were attended by 15 to 25 members of the House and Senate and others, who gathered around my table at 8 o'clock in the morning to partake of a meal which ended with wheat cakes and Vermont maple syrup. During the last session of the Congress I invited all the members of the Senate, all the chairmen and ranking Democratic members of the committees of the House, and finally had breakfast with the officers of both houses of the Congress. Although we did not undertake to discuss matters of public business at these breakfasts, they were productive of a spirit of good fellowship, which was no doubt a helpful influence to the transaction of public business.

In addition to these White House events, the President and his wife go out to 12 official dinners. They begin with the Vice President, go on among the 10 members of the Cabinet, and close with the Speaker of the House. Aside from these, it is not customary for the President to accept the hospitality of any individuals. This results not from any desire on his part to be exclusive, but rather arises from an application of the principle of equality. The number of days in his term of office is limited. If he gave up all the time when he is not otherwise necessarily engaged, it is doubtful if he could find 50 evenings in a year when he could accept invitations. At once he would be confronted with the necessity of deciding which to accept and which to reject. If he served eight years, he could touch only the fringe of official Washington, even if he chose to disregard all the rest of the country. The only escape from an otherwise impossible situation is to observe the rule of refusing all social invitations.

Rules of Precedence

The President stands at the head of all official and social rank in the nation. As he is commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy—all their officers are his subordinates. As he is the head of the government, he outranks all other public officials. As the first citizen, he is placed at the top of the social scale. Wherever he goes, whenever he appears, he must be assigned the place of honor. It follows from this that he cannot consistently attend a dinner or any other function given by someone else in honor of any other person. He can have ceremonies of his own at the White House, or outside, in which he recognizes the merit of others and bestows upon them appropriate honors. But his participation in any other occasion of such a nature is confined to sending an appropriate message.

It would make great confusion in all White House relations unless the rules of precedence were observed. If this were not done, the most ambitious and intruding would seize the place of honor, or it would be bestowed by favor. In both cases all official position would be ignored. In its working out, therefore, the adoption of rules which take no account of persons, but simply apply to places is the only method which is in harmony with our spirit of equality. In its application it gives us more completely a government of laws and not of men.

names. I know they are not our books."

Mackrell, for the Malone forces, said he would answer Christy's statements later.

"I'm not going to make any fool, premature declarations," said Mackrell. "I'll go over the thing, and then hit it hard."

He said Johnson was "working around Malone headquarters, taking tax receipt orders up to the assessment office for ward chairmen who were too busy to go up there themselves."

FAKE BOOKS FOUND

Discovery of the fraudulent books was explained by Christy, who said that in August he had made a new arrangement with the tax board to change the code letters to avoid some confusion and expedite the issuance of tax receipts. This change dropped "A" as a code letter.

Johnson, Christy said, brought the tax receipt orders to him September 3 oQr 4, ooking them over he discovered that many bore number "A1." The agreement with the tax office not providing for such a code, Christy asked Schad if there had been a change. Schad informed him there had not and began an investigation. On September 5 Schad and the other members of the board sent Christy a letter stating that three of the books were fraudulent and advising him not to issue any tax receipts against them.

The fraudulent books contain names from the First, Second, Third, Fifth, Twelfth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth wards, Christy testified.

In one book, Christy said, there are 1,147 assessments from the First ward. Against these Johnson has presented 1,145 tax orders. Another book contains 825 assessments in the Third ward, against which Christy has been asked to issue 846 tax receipts. One of the books contains 398 Thirteenth Ward assessments. Christy has been asked to issue 396 receipts for these. Johnson presented orders for 301 receipts against 303 Twenty-first ward names in one of the three books. Another set of Third ward assessments in the books has a list of 279 names for which orders for 280 tax receipts were asked by Johnson.

ARMSTRONG CO-OPERATES

Many adherents of the Martin, Kline and Malone mayoralty camps jammed into the County Commissioners' office for the hearing there, as did representatives of the Bar Association.

Lindsay, Martin campaign chairman, was informed by Armstrong that Schad has assigned 15 of his best qualified assessors to check the charges that have appeared in the newspapers.

"If we find anything wrong we will be glad to go to court with you to see that things are made right," Armstrong said.

The grand jury inquiry got under way immediately and Peter A. Connors, former homicide squad chief, now a Malone investigator, was called before the jurors. He was questioned for an hour.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner announced that other witnesses would be subpenaed this afternoon and tha questioning would be resumed tomorrow morning. He assigned his assistants, Andrew T. Parks and George F. P. Langfitt, to help him in the inquiry.

Charles B. Prichard, chairman of the Malone legal committee, said that after being informed that many Malone supporters were not or could not get assessed while lists of the Kline supporters were being added, he had visited Schad. Later he had taken Detective Peter Conners to Christy.

"Were you refused any privilege that should be accorded you or any citizen to investigate?" asked McGovern.

"No," replied Prichard, adding that both men had been fair and courteous.

"Do you know of your own knowledge of any fraudulent names on the assessment books?" continued McGovern.

"I do not," said Prichard.

M'GOVERN ANGRY

Schad testified that, as far as he knew, no one had been refused assessment and that no lists of names had been added to the books.

Armstrong asked if anyone present had anything to present. There was no answer and he adjourned the hearing, although McGovern wanted a recess until 3 o'clock.

"I'll be here at 3 o'clock myself to hear anyone that wants to come in," snapped McGovern.

Judge Rowand ordered the inquiry after Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for Malone, had appeared before him and alleged that a "gigantic conspiracy" was afoot to add 60,000 phantom voters to Pittsburgh's electorate to re-elect Mayor Charles H. Kline.

District Attorney Gardner joined Eaton in the petition, which bore the names of Connors and a dozen others, acting as qualified electors. Connors, ousted as head of the homicide squad by the Kline administration, gathered the facts on which the petition was based.

KLINE AID THERE

While Eaton made his charges, Attorney Charles P. Lang, assistant city solicitor and law partner of Mayor Kline, watched the proceedings from counsel table but took no part in them.

Eaton averred that he had knowledge that led him to believe at least 10,000 names already had been placed fraudulently upon the assessment books for the purpose of obtaining bogus tax receipts. He and his associates, he said, have reason to believe that at least 60,000 false assessments will be added before the primaries.

JURY SPEED DEMANDED

He urged that the assessment records be impounded by the district attorney and alleged that several county offices had been broken into by persons who apparently desired to steal or alter election records.

Judge Rowand, charging the jurors, told them that "where there is smoke there is fire, and you must find the fire." The jury was instructed to proceed as rapidly as possible and not to allow any other matter to interfere with the election inquiry.

Eaton's petition embodied about 200 specific allegations of phantom assessments and other irregularities. These, he said, represented only "surface-scratching."

The petition recited to the court that "the campaign for the Republican nomination for mayor of the City of Pittsburgh is especially strenuous and vigorous, and your petitioners are informed, believe and therefore aver that numerous election frauds have been and will be attempted, especially directed to securing said nomination for one Charles H. Kline, and that a gigantic conspiracy has been entered into by persons whose exact names are at present unknown to your petitioners, but whose names and identity your petitioners believe and aver can be secured by proper investigation by a grand jury of this county."

"TAX BOARD FOR KLINE"

The petition alleged that the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes was dominated by Kline men. It urged the grand jury to subpena the members of this board and try to learn from them at whose orders and by whom phantom voters had been listed upon the assessment books.

After reciting instances of illegal assessment and registration, the petitioners declared that these were "only a small part of similar acts, things and practices which have been had and done and are being had and done not only in the wards and districts in which the above specific instances have been set forth, but also in a large number of other wards and districts throughout the city of Pittsburgh."

The petition alleged that voters had been assessed from such places as railroad retaining walls, the public wharf, parking lots, vacant office buildings, lunch rooms and addresses which simply do not exist. In districts with many aliens, there are houses with five or six occupants from which as many as 20 to 30 persons have been assessed, it was averred.

While the Malone forces fought their court battle, more arrests for multiple or false registration were expected. At the Malone headquarters it was "understood" that as many as 10 or 15 warrants had been issued for vote cheaters. It was denied these arrests had been instigated by Malone leaders, although the warrants were sworn out before Alderman Thomas Flanigan, Malone adherent in the First Ward.

Professor Discovers Milk Sugar Process

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Cornell University announced today that a patent had been applied for in the name of the university for a new inexpensive process of making milk sugar, the discovery of a member of the Cornell faculty. The process yields a kind of milk sugar not formerly on the market, a sweet that may be used like ordinary table sugar, yet in sufficient quantities to obtain easily some of the benefits of drinking milk copiously, but without the milk.

STRIVE TO SAVE 3 IN MINE

COPPEROPOLIS, Cal., Sept. 9.—(INS.)—A toiling rescue crew early today was nearing the underground tomb of three miners, who have been imprisoned since Thursday on the 1,500-foot level of the Calaveras Copper Company mine following a cave-in.

The workers are tunneling through a lower depth, timbering walls and roof as they go along, for the regular shafts and passageways are blocked with earth and rocks.

Although there is some possibility that the three men still live, it is feared that they will be dead when they are finally reached. The men are Ed Bixler, K. King and Gonzalo Gonzales.

The accident killed three other miners and seriously injured a fourth.

Passenger Dies In Plane Crash

OSHKOSH, Wis., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—One man was burned to death and another critically injured last night as a plane, piloted by Omar Graef, of Kaukauna nose-dived into the ground seven miles north of here and burst into flames. The pilot, who had no license to carry passengers, was not injured.

2 HELD IN PLOT AGAINST WOMAN

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Two men are under arrest here today on conspiracy to murder charged as the result of an alleged plot hatched in jail at San Francisco to take Mrs. Pearl Sutcliffe, wealthy Wilshire society matron, "for a ride."

Orville T. Forrester, 39, and Patrick Mullen, 38, are the men being held.

According to Detective Captains S. J. McCaleb and H. H. Perry, the two suspects and two other men were paid $5,000 in securities last July by Walter J. Sutcliffe to come to Los Angeles and kill his wife, who is suing him for divorce.

Sutcliffe is serving a three-year term in the San Francisco jail, following his conviction last March of assault with intent to murder Carl Bengston, youthful pianist. The assault, it was brought out at the trial, took place last February in an exclusive San Francisco Hotel room when Sutcliffe and two private detectives surprised the young musician and Mrs. Sutcliffe together.

NAVAL PARLEYS REACH CRISIS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A critical stage has been reached in the naval negotiations with Great Britain.

The latest British offer in the cruiser controversy is unsatisfactory both to President Hoover and vnto the admirals of the Navy General Board, who have been studying it for a week. Mr. Hoover doesn't like it because the tonnage limitation proposed would still necessitate completion of the 15-cruiser program which he had hoped to avoid. The admirals don't like it because it would still leave the British navy preponderant in gross tonnage as well as number of ships.

This week will see the American objections go forward to London—if, indeed, they have not already been communicated to Ambassador Dawes.

Although the actual figures proposed by the British are withheld it is understood that a tonnage limitation of approximately 350,000 has been suggested. Britain now has built, building and authorized some 407,000 tons of cruisers, embraced in 64 units. The reduction would be accomplished by not replacing 10 old light cruisers of 3,750 tons each, which will be ready for the scrappile in 1935, and by the sacrifice of 23,000 tons of cruisers that exist only in the blueprints. Below this figure, the British admiralty has refused to go, it is understood here.

The American Navy now has built and building 155,000 tons of modern cruisers. Congress last year ordered the immediate construction of 15 units of 10,000 tons each, or 150,000 tons. Thus even with completion of this program, the American Navy would still be some 45,000 tons short of what Britain considers her irreducible minimum.

PALESTINE JEWS PUT FAITH IN AMERICAN SYMPATHY

NEED WORKERS TO CARRY ON PROJECTS

Editor Inspired by Courage Of Colonists, Who Refuse To Lose Faith in Program

Herewith is a second dramatic eye-witness account of scenes and disorders in Palestine growing out of the Arab-Jewish outbreaks. It portrays the situation in Jerusalem and other centers of terror and sheds new light on a racial conflagration that has shocked the world. It is written by a distinguished Jewish editor who has passed through the orgy of bloodshed that has swept over Palestine.

By DR. S. MARGOSHES,
Editor-in-Chief of "The Day," Leading American Jewish Newspaper.
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc., and "The Day," by special arrangement with "The Day.")
Special Cable Dispatch.

JERUSALEM, Sept. 6.—(Delayed.)—Up to now my observations have been most pessimistic. This is because everything was vivid before me and the horrible sights continued to haunt me.

At Afulah, at Tiberias and other parts of Galilee, I encountered so much misery and tragedy that I could not restrain my reaction of depression.

However, I wish to state that the foregoing facts do not represent the entire condition of the country, nor the state of mind of the Jewish population as a whole.

Courage Reigns

The Emek, for example, offered a totally different scene. Here courage and valor reigned in place of hopelessness and sorrow. Here one felt that the settlers were aflame with hope and firm conviction that this bloodshed is at an end.

True enough, the Emek suffered comparatively little in the recent disasters, and the few disturbances that did occur left no victims. Several of the granaries were burned down; broken chimneys rest on some of the housetops, but fortunately there was no human disaster.

The Jewish settlers of the Emek are of the pioneer type—rugged and unafraid. The grim events have left them as dauntless as ever, and to them the words of our national hymn, "Hatikvah," are not merely pretty phrases, but a deep consciousness which permeates their blood.

The Emek is about the safest place in Palestine today, and we felt great relief and joy to see it all. We were also told that shortly the farming would begin again in the valley, the work which was intercepted by the devastating outbreaks. And soon we may hope again to see the Jewish settlers work in their orchards and fields, and singing away at their task.

Now about the "Kvuzoth"—the workers' co-operative colonies? The heroism and idealism shown by the men and women who make up these colonies impressed me beyond words. Theirs is a life of brawn and sun, theirs is an existence of earth and love of life. For these workingmen and women face the most rigorous kind of struggle, that of turning fallow ground into habitable territory. I talked with many of these settlers. They inquired about their fellow-workers in America, and they also expressed the hope that from the latter will come aid and encouragement. It is machinery and farming implements they need. It is more workers they need in order to continue their pioneer work.

The Polish Pioneers

At Ein-Harod I met a group of 10 pioneers who arrived from Poland on the eve of the disturbances. I was naturally interested to get the sentiment of these young people who received the first impression of their new country under such unfortunate conditions. It was, indeed, most gratifying to me to observe their fine spirit of determination and optimism. There was not the slightest feeling of regret on their part. One of the group, a youth about 20, with a boyish face and laughing eyes, scoffed at my solicitous attitude, saying that pogroms were nothing new to them. Poland having given them sufficient opportunity to know the term "pogrom" thoroughly. He concluded by saying:

"You are an American, and anti-Semitic outbursts are new to you, but we of Eastern Europe are familiar with every possible brand of pogrom. We are here to stay and to work."

It is hoped that the recent newcomers will find employment for as soon as peace is assured, it is expected that there will be employment for thousands of workers. The prospect of employment is most encouraging to all the settlers in this terrible situation. Authorities feel and hope that Palestine will arrive in due time to the point that France and Belgium reached after the World War, proportionately speaking, of course. The process of reconstruction will depend largely upon the assistance that will come from the Jews of America, and particularly hope is placed in the Jewish Agency, which has so solemnly undertaken to assist in this task.

The Jew in Palestine takes great exception to the word "pogrom." The following incident will illustrate this. I had a conversation with a colonist from the Kevutzah "Tel-Hai." Speaking of the tragic events the word pogrom escaped me. The colonist, an energetic youth with sun-tanned features, interrupted me with rising anger.

"You have mentioned the word 'pogrom,'" he said. "It is a hideous word, a word that recalls Jewish tragedy in Czarist Russia, in the bloodstained Ukraine. It is an insult to Palestine, the land of Israel, to use it here."

"I understand your objections,' I replied, "but so many Jewish lives have been lost here, what else could one call the atrocities in Hebron and the massacre in Safed?"

"You forget," the young colonist reminded me, "that we resisted the Arab attacks. The reason there were so many casualties among us is that we were so few in number, compared to our assailants, and we were so inadequately armed. The marvel is that any of us are alive today."

I was forced to agree with him. The more I see of the stricken Jewish colonies the more I realize that the spirit of the Palestine pioneers alone saved the situation. If it had not been for their heroic efforts to improve a defense corps, Arab fury would have swept everything before it.

A Visit to Beth-Alpha

What the lack of proper means of defense meant to the Jews I found most apparent in the little colony on Beth-Alpha. Colonel Kisch and I arrived there at dusk. There was not a sign of life to be seen or heard. Later we heard that there were settlers in the colony huddled in fear within their own walls. Some of them told us that their settlement had been attacked five times in six days. The result is that the colony is practically in ruins.

Not far from Beth-Alpha I met an elderly woman wandering aimlessly. Just a few weeks ago she came to Palestine from Galigia to be with her children. Haltingly she told me her story:

"I never dreamed that such atrocities could happen in the Holy Land. What I have seen here was far worse than the tales of pogroms I have heard from my parents in Russia in my youth."

Suddenly she drew herself up proudly:

"But here I will stay, I and my children. We put our trust in the God of Israel, who will save our people's land.

This is the spirit one meets everywhere among old and young in every city and colony throughout the country. From what I have been told I believe that very few Americans will leave in an attempt to escape to safety. It is estimated that there are about 2,000 American Jews in Palestine today. I have met many of them in my tour of the land, and they are firm in their determination to risk their lives rather than to desert the Jewish homeland in its dire need.

4 BOYS ADMIT ROBBERIES

Four North Side youths, charged with highway robbery, possession of firearms and the theft of two automobiles, today admitted complicity in a series of robberies of pedestrians and motorists in that section at a hearing before Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court.

The quartet, Albert Bamrick, 20, of 1037 Spring Garden avenue; Joseph Polky, 20, of 1363 South Side avenue; Rudolph Vacek, 18, of 2301 Spring Garden avenue, and Charles Durst, 18, of 1906 Gilbert street, were held for the grand jury as the result of a holdup at the Gulf service station, California and Island avenues, last week, and several other holdups.

Miss Julia Bednarko, 18, of 1104 Sarah street, who police said was with Bamrick in a room at 102 East North avenue, when he was captured, was turned over to social workers by Magistrate Brandon.

More than a half dozen alleged victims testified at the hearing and said they believed the four robbed them. J. W. Connolly, Riverview avenue, told the judge he was held up three days ago.

Three of the suspects were captured by police after a taxi chase following the service station holdup, where $10 was taken.

Rum Runners Lose Cargo in Pistol Fight

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Rum runners and coast guardsmen met in the Huron River early today and engaged in a pistol battle, leavong the government forces in possession of two boats loaded with 250 cases of liquor. No casualties were reported.

The smuggling convoy, consisting of a speedboat and two other craft, was discovered in the Huron River at 2 a. m. by the crew of a coast guard boat. The shots were exchanged as the rum runners cut loose the liquor boats and escaped in their speedboat.

Rice, Flier Who Found Air Liner, To Get $5,000

LOS ANGLES, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—That George Rice, Western Air Express pilot, will receive the $5,000 reward offered by T. A. T. for the finding of the lost airliner City of San Francisco, was indicated here today by officials of the T. A. T. Company.

Airplanes which participated in the search for the City of San Francisco will be re-serviced before they leave the secen of searching operations, it was announced by officials of the company.

When the company will resume service is not announced.

"That is of secondary importance now," officials stated.

Pioneers' Rifle Explodes; Man May Lose Eye

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 9.—Target practice with an old-fashioned muzzle loading rifle which had not been fired for several years may cost Bertrand Cox, 20, near Waynesburg, the sight of one eye. The gun exploded Saturday when he and another youth were firing it. The weapon was the property of C. H. Day, who prized it as an heirloom of pioneer days.

AUTO CRASHES KILL 12

BUFFAO, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Five persons were killed and two injured seriously in the crash of an interurban car into a truck near Angola.

The dead were: Jack Brown, 50, driver of the truck; his son, Jack Brown, Jr., 12; Stanley Ziembe, 35; Adam Ciader, 47, and an unidentified man, employed with a road repair gang.

Two boys injured may die.

H. B. Cook, motorman of the trolley car, told police he blew his whistle as his car approached the crossing, but the driver of the truck apparently did not hear the warning. The trolley dragged the truck 200 feet down the track.

DIE IN CRASH

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Five persons were killed and 15 injured in a collision between a motor bus and a truck and trailer five miles east of Benton Harbor yesterday.

Only three of the dead have been identified. They are: Mrs. Jose Quinones, of North Branch, Mich., and her infant daughter, and William Stewart, 25, of Saginaw, Mich., a Negro. Three other Quinones children were on the bus, but escaped injury.

The bus driver, John Shane, 25, Owosso, Mich., is held. Only five of the 25 in the bus, operated by the Indian Trails Line, escaped injury.

The truck and trailer, owned by the Goodrich Transit Company, was en route from Benton Harbor to Kalamazoo with a load of freight. The collision occurred on a straight stretch of concrete highway. Both drivers claimed they turned out and slowed down. The truck driver, Joe Belinger, of Kalamazoo, was unhurt.

The dead were brought to morgues here and half a dozen ambulances rushed the injured to Mercy Hospital, where an extra force of nurses were called to duty.

MOTHER, SON KILLED

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—A mother and son were killed and four persons injured in a collision between a pleasure car and a Montreal-New York bus on the Milton-Highland road in Ulster County late Saturday. The driver of the bus, Harry F. Dussy, of Albany, was held on a technical charge of assault.

The dead were Mrs. Jan de Laet, Brooklyn, N. Y., and her son, Jan, Jr., 8 years old. The injured also were from Brooklyn. Witnesses said the machines collided on a curve as the bus swung wide. Of the 24 passngers in the bus, eight were treated for minor hurts.

River Breaks Dam, Damages Property

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The River Karamea today broke through a dam formed by the earthquake last June in the gorge near Karamea and caused considerable damage to farm property. No lives were lost.

Two new earthquakes shook Arthur's Pass on the crest of the Southern Alps this morning.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

OVER 200 DEAD IN TYPHOON

MANILA, Sept. 9.—Deaths caused by the typhoon which swept Southern Luzon Island had increased to more than 200, with thousands of persons homeless in the stricken areas.

The United States destroyer Edsall was en route to the East coast of Luzon for relief work while Army planes surveyed the stricken areas.

Thousands of persons were reported to be homeless and hungry. A water shortage in Manila resulted when the typhoon broke a big water main, but was relieved somewhat when emergency flumes brought in a small flow.

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Health Instruction of Vital Importance

EVERY pupil entering the public schools should be given a careful physical examination. An accurate record should be made of everything of importance discovered and an effort should be made by the school authorities to have corrected such defects.

DR. COPELAND

The parents should be notified and to escape further defects, there should be a health training program in the schools.

Appropriate instructions in health, as I view the matter, is one of the most important functions of the public schools. Reasonable insistence should be placed on the correction of physical defects before promotion. This would give us a better race.

Too often the schools teach everything except how to live. They teach the natural sciences, literature, history, mathematics, and the languages. I admit at once the importance of each of these subjects, but all of them put together mean little or nothing to a graduate who is without health. All the degrees in the world and the possession of a Phi Beta Kappa key will not recompense for a broken body.

I wish there could be included in the curriculum of every school, thorough instruction in sanitation and personal hygiene. If this were done, I have no doubt the sickness and death rate of this country would be greatly reduced.

It is essential to the highest degree of community progress to have complete understanding and co-operation between the health officials and the educational authorities. This will insure the correction of physical defects before promotion is had from one grade to another.

In most large cities it is the practice to require good health before issuing "working papers." By this I mean that if a child is under the necessity of seeking employment before he reaches the age when he is free from the obligation to attend school, he must give evidence of having had treatment for any physical defects. Glasses must be fitted if they are needed. The teeth must be put in proper condition. Diseased tonsils and adenoids are removed and a physical examination determines whether the lungs and heart are normal.

I suppose when we are fully civilized there will be such strict attention in every home to the discovery and correction of physical defects that governmental interference will be unnecessary. Until that happy day arrives, however, I hope the school and health authorities will heartily co-operate in order to guarantee for every community as well-developed children are are to be found anywhere in the world.

The Duty Letter -:- By Madge Geyer

OH what a wonderful week-end they've had! But now comes the hardest part of all—the duty letter. Of course, one knows that it simply must be written, but it certainly is a task. Why can't one simply express one's thanks in words and let it go at that? But no, the conventions demand the duty letter, so she sits there with puckered brow and paralyzed hands and can't think of a thing.

And all the while He's standing in back of her urging her to let it go, for the time being and come along to the tennis game. But she knows that if she doesn't do it now she never will. So there she sits crumbling page after page, for each one sounds worse than the last. Darn the conventions anyhow! They're a nuisance.

But then a thought strikes her, and she realizes that it was on one of these week-end parties that she met the dearest man of all. And her pen flies over the paper, and presto; the letter is finished. And that's that.

LOVE'S AWAKENING

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Plans Are Made to Protect Prince Georges

AS Mr. Underwood finished outlining his plan for the trapping of the assassin who had tried to kill Prince Georges, and who we felt sure had attempted Mary's life also, I could not conceal a shudder. It was an ingenious scheme, this planning to leave unguarded a hotel room opening upon the same balcony as that of Prince Georges, but I know that despite Harry Underwood's minimizing of the danger, there would be peril for the prince and for the man with him. I was sufficiently acquainted with Harry Underwood to know that he himself and none other, would be in the room with Prince Georges when the "tiger trap" should be "baited."

That Lillian shared my fear, and my knowledge of her husband's purpose was evident by the suddenly etched lines around her mouth. But her voice was calm, her face unruffled as she commented upon his plan.

"You have a winner there, old dear," she said enthusiastically. "I don't see how it can fail. But, you're not taking any fool chances, are you? You'll have sufficient help?"

"Being reasonably fond of my own skin, I shall attend to that little detail," her husband assured her, laughing. "But," he became serious again, "there mustn't be any delay. How soon can you pull up stakes here, Lady Fair? I'll guarantee to have my frau out in twenty-four hours."

"I shan't need more than that," I said, "after father gets home I mustn't leave Junior until then."

"You won't need to," Mr. Underwood reassured me. "These next two or three days aren't dangerous ones. I don't suppose those devils even know that Prince Georges is in the hospital. It's after he gets out and goes back to his hotel that the danger will begin."

"Why have him go back to the hotel at all?" Lillian asked practically.

"That's a good idea," her husband decided, "when I go over to see him tomorrow, I'll put that up to him and have him stay at the hospital until he can go into the city."

"You'll have your hands full," I commented dryly. "You must remember that the young man has just engaged himself to be married, and he's not likely to view patiently an attempt to keep him in the hospital when he isn't hurt enough to warrant his staying there."

I hated to hurt Noel with this reminder of Mary's betrothal to the prince, but I knew that the danger to Mary had roused him to a pitch where he was in danger of forgetting everything save love for her. But I was contrite, indeed, when I saw him wince at my words as if someone had struck him a blinding blow.

"There's sense in your words, mate," Mr. Underwood drawled with a covert look at Noel. "But," with sudden truculence, "that's where my bucko lad is going to stay until I give him leave to get out. I've got the responsibility for his safety and the breaking up of that ring of assassins on my shoulders, and nobody's love affair is going to interfere with it."

Noel's face lighted suddenly, then clouded again. It was easy to read the boy's thoughts. At first he had been involuntarily elated at the thought of the opportunities to see Mary which the prince's confinement to the hospital would give him. Then his sense of chivalry and fair play effectually shattered his roseate visions.

"There's one thing," the boy said resolutely, looking at me as Mr. Underwood finished his ultimatum to the absent prince. "If Prince Georges is to stay in the hospital I mustn't see Mary until he comes out again."

Behind his back, Lillian clapped her hands noiselessly, and a gleam of friendly admiration came into Harry Underwood's eyes.

"Bully for you, boy," he said. "You're one white hombre."

He put out his hand to the boy, and Noel grasped it convulsively while the color flooded his face.

"That will be easy to arrange, Noel," I said. "And it's only what we were planning anyway, tonight, you know."

"I know," he said, looking at me unhappily, and I knew that he regretted the compact he had made to pretend an affection for Princess Olina instead of breaking the engagement which she had forced upon him. But there was no other way, now, I told myself. This attack upon Prince Georges had made it imperative for the "royal international romances" to remain as they were for the time being.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Slaves to Trousers

"MY DEAR MISS ROWLAND: 'Can you work out any logical clue to the significance of and reason for a garment like the waistcoat?'—And THAT from a lady who is a natural born philosopher, psychologist and expert on behaviorism?'

* * *

"Foolish woman! To hide his suspenders, of course! Suspenders are unsightly and suggest corned beef and cabbage. They are a suspense—on six buttons. Some of us wear a belt, these days, and are immune to that thrill one used to get when one of the back suspender buttons gave 'way and all the responsibility rested on the other button.

HELEN ROWLAND

"Others, unfortunately, could 'reach for a cigaret' oil their lives and still be rotund enough to require suspenders for the sake of dignity. "W. C. L."

This illuminating letter from a gentleman from New Jersey has relieved my mind immensely in regard to the psychology of the waistcoat—or common or garden VEST.

The waistcoat was an "after-thought" to the suspenders. And the suspenders were an "after-thought" to TROUSERS! Necessity is the mother of invention—and its father is trousers!

* * *

Just as I have always contended, most of a man's clothes are "after-thoughts." But, there is a central idea around which his whole sartorial make-up is constructed. That strange, modern neither garment, or, in polite parlance, trousers!

* * *

Starting with the trousers, you can work out the reason for all the other little odds and ends and mechanical contrivances that make up his wardrobe from spats to collar buttons and tie clasps.

* * *

But, WHY trousers? Why should a man make himself a slave to any garment so unwieldy, uncomfortable and unreliable as trousers? A garment that has caused him more embarrassment, more anxiety and more inconvenience than all the rest of his clothes? A garment that is hot and clinging in summer, yet leaves him a prey to all the four winds of winter?

* * *

Yet, with all the recent revolt against stiff collars, hard shirts, coats and collar buttons, not a whisper of rebellion has been heard against trousers. Both the radicals and the conservatives still cling desperately to PANTS!

* * *

Why not knickerbockers, or plus fours, or riding breeches, all light and graceful and comfortable, and so built that the wind can't whistle up them? What tremors and qualms men must have suffered when they placed their faith in suspenders, and their very dignity and reputation often hung upon one button by a single thread!

* * *

Women may be vain, extravagant and erratic in matters of dress, but NO woman would let any ONE garment dominate her whole life, happiness and nervous system as trousers dominate a man's!

* * *

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, September 10

A DAY of great activity and momentous occurrences is presaged from the planetary configurations. There may be sudden moves or radical departures, with great initiative and enterprise following probably on a disruption in employment. But new arrangements should be profitable and purely personal relations happy.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of an important and memorable year, with unforseen change or travel. Employment may feel disruptive forces, but general affairs will prosper and bring happiness.

A child born on this day may have many-sided talents, possibly in original lines, with much initiative and adventure to contribute to a prosperous and happy life. Employment may bring friction.

One science only will one genius fit, so vast is art, so narrow human wit.—Pope.

Cleans White Felt

To clean a white felt hat, make a paste of magnesia and milk, and spread it thickly on the hat with a brush. Leave it for 24 hours, and then brush it off with a clean, hard brush.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Expressing Thanks for Hospitality

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When you are invited out to dinner, when is the most appropriate time to thank for the dinner?

2. If you are going to the theater also, is it better to wait until you thank for the theater, or should you thank for each separately? H. B.

WE do not exactly thank for the dinner—we thank for the invitation and for the general hospitality. Thanking for food in this social sense is out-of-order—we take the food for granted, but we never take the spirit of hospitality for granted. At least we don't if we are well-bred. Of course, if we know the hostess well, and it is not a formal party, we can lightly say something like, "No one makes the pie that your cook makes, Mary. When you ask me to dinner, I always hope that you will have pie!" or "Mary, how is it that your fried chicken tastes quite different from anyone else's? It is the best food in the world!"

But under the usual circumstances, we say, "Thank you so much for asking me to come tonight. I have had a most delightful time."

2. You may wait to thank for both together, or it is quite natural, on your way to the theater, to say what a happy time you have had and how "delightful it is to see you again."

Introduce the Minister

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be married in a church that I have attended for several years. My future husband is out of town and will not be here until the day of the wedding, and it is, therefore, necessary that I make arrangements with the minister for the wedding. We will have two of our friends with us. What I want to know is this: Do I introduce everyone to the minister, or isn't it necessary? R. B.

YES, it would be polite to introduce the minister and the friends who accompany you to see him.

Presenting Wedding Gift

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have been going about with a young man for the past two years. My brother is to be married soon. When presenting the present should I add his name along with mine?

2. Is it proper, when meeting a person for the first time at their home, to accept the invitation to dine?

3. When presenting a young man to an elderly person, which name should be given first?

A READER.

NO, this would not be good form. Send your own present to your brother's fiancee—your gift is a very important one, since the relationship is so close. Then if this young man wishes to send a wedding present, his should be sent separately, with his own card inclosed.

2. Yes, if the circumstances warrant it. This would depend on many things.

3. The name of the older person should be given first.

Massara's Absence From Banquet Is Resented By Gang Chief

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In a hold-up of the Casa Alvarado, Capt. Courtney, of the Chicago detective force, is shot and killed by Rico, gang lieutenant. Sam Vettori, leader of the gang, fearing for his neck, berates Rico for the "gunplay." Rico promptly usurps Sam's position with the approval of the gangsters. In the uproar that follows the murder, the gangsters keep in hiding and Tony Passa, ex-choir boy, loses his nerve and leaves to inform his parish priest. He is killed on the church steps by Rico's bullets. Rico, with Vettori, Otero and others of the gang, visit Tony's home to view the body. Detective Flaherty arrives and questions Rico, who is defiant. Sam Vettori resents Rico's rise to power, but he must now bow to his wishes. The gang gives a banquet for Rico. The "Big Boy," political power, attends, but Joe Massara, dude member of the gang, who took part in the hold-up, fails to come.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XV.

"I want a drink."

Rico looked at Pepi.

"Get her a drink," he said.

The Big Boy took Rico aside and said:

"I want to see you a minute, Rico."

Rico said:

"Listen, if you see Joe Massara tomorrow you tell him to look me up. I got something to say to that bird."

"I'll be seeing him maybe," said the Big Boy. "I got a date with his boss tomorrow morning. There's a square guy, Rico. DeVoss is a square guy all right. Never have to nudge him for dough."

Rico seemed in a bad humor.

"They tell me you lined up something good," said the Big Boy.

Rico nodded.

"Yeah, it's gonna be a money maker. Little Arnie wised me up. I'm gonna give him a split. That's the game now. Sam never had sense enough to get in on it."

"Little Arnie, eh? That guy'd double-cross his grandmother."

"He'll only double-cross me once," said Rico.

"I believe you," said the Big Boy; then, putting his hand on Rico's shoulder, he went on: "Funny for you to split with Arnie. How about Blondy?"

"Arnie don't give a damn. He's all shot to pieces."

"No wonder," said the Big Boy, "with a woman like that."

Rico grinned.

"Ain't she a bearcat?" he said; then his face clouded. "Wonder what the hell Joe Massara's game is?"

The Big Boy looked at Rico for a moment.

"That little hunky dancer over at DeVoss' has got him down. They tell me he's going straight."

Rico laughed unpleasantly.

"Yeah? Well, I'll have to go over and give that bird an earful."

"Better stay out of that end of town, Rico."

"To hell with that."

Sam Vettori came in, followed by three waiters bringing the soup.

"All right," said Sam, "we're all set."

When the meal was over the Big Boy asked Rico to make a speech. There was a prolonged clamor. Rico got up.

"All right," he said, "if you birds want me to make a speech, here you are: I want to thank you guys for this banquet. It sure is swell. The liquor is good, so they tell me, I don't drink it myself, and the food don't leave nothing to be desired. I guess we all had a swell time and it sure is good to see all you guys gathered together. Well, I guess that's about all. Only I wish you guys wouldn't get drunk and raise hell, as that's the way a lot of birds get bumped off."

Rico sat down. The applause lasted for over a minute. Then Ottavio got up with a bottle in his hand.

"Here's to Rico and Blondy and the Big Boy."

Everybody shouted and made a grab for bottles and glasses. Blackie Avezzano fell under the table and stayed there, lying on his face. After the toast was drunk, Killer Pepi and Kid Bean began to quarrel. The Kid picked up a plate and struck at Pepi, who threw a bottle at the Kid, missing him by a fraction of an inch.

Rico banged on the table.

"Cut it out, you guys. Ain't that a hell of a way to act?"

Pepi and the Kid shook hands and another toast was drunk.

A waiter came in the door and went over to Rico.

"Couple of newspaper guys, boss. They want to take a flashlight."

"What's the idea?" the Big Boy inquired.

"Send 'em up," said Rico.

"We're gonna get our mugs shot," cried Blondy Belle.

"Maybe we are," said Rico.

"What's the idea?" the Big Boy reiterated.

"We ain't got nothing to hide," said Rico.

The waiter returned, followed by two newspapermen, one of whom was carrying a big camera. Rico motioned them over.

"Who sent you?" he asked.

Sam Vettori came in and went over to Rico.

"They're O. K., Rico," he said, "they been here before."

"Sure, we're O. K.," said the photographer, a little intimidated by Rico's manner.

"Well, spill it," said Rico, "what's the idea of the flashlight?"

"Well, we got a section in the Sunday paper about how different classes of people live in Chicago. See? Last week we featured Lake Forest. Had some pictures of the swells, see, and the dumps where they lived. This Sunday we want Little Italy. We just heard about the banquet they were giving you, Mr. Rico, so we kinda thought . . ."

"O. K.," said Rico, "but make it snappy."

"I'm out of this picture," said the Big Boy, rising and walking over to the doorway. Sam Vettori took his place.

After maneuvering about for a few minutes the photographer got the correct slant. He put the powder on the little tray.

"Now!" he cried.

Rico sat with his thumbs in the armholes of his vest, looking very stern. There was a blinding flash. Ottavio Vettori leapt into the air and crying "My God, I'm shot," fell face down across the table. Everybody laughed.

When the newspapermen had gone the Big Boy came over and put his hand on Rico's arm.

"They may pick you up on that."

"Who the hell's gonna see it?"

"You don't know who's gonna see it. That was a bad play, Rico."

Rico laughed.

"If they pick me up, I'll alibi them to death."

When the banquet was over Rico had Otero call him a cab. Blondy Belle was a little drunk and Rico had to support her as they went down the stairs. As she weighed about twenty pounds more than he did, this was not an easy job. As they were going out the side-entrance, Flaherty left his table in the club and came over to them.

He put his hand on Rico's shoulder.

"Getting up in the world, ain't you, Rico?"

Rico looked at him.

"Don't you know your old pal, Jim Flaherty?"

"Sure I know you. What's the big idea?"

"Go chase yourself around the block, flat-foot," said Blondy Belle; "if I ain't getting sick of seeing bulls."

"Hello, Blondy," said Flaherty, "you and Rico hitting it off, eh? That's the old ticket. Rico's a good boy, but he's young. If they don't put him behind the bars, he'll be a man yet."

"What's the idea, Flaherty," asked Rico.

"Why, I don't want you to forget that I'm your friend," said Flaherty. "I got my eyes on you, Rico. I like to see a young guy getting up in the world."

"Yeah?" said Rico.

The cab was waiting at the curb and one of the waiters went out and opened the door for them. Rico boosted Blondy Belle into the cab. Flaherty stood in the doorway and watched them drive off.

"The nerve of that dumb cop," said Blondy.

But Rico had forgotten Flaherty. He sat thinking about Joe Massara. Gentleman Joe was getting too good for them, eh? He was going to turn softie.

"Well, I guess not," said Rico.

EASY — By Beatrice BURTON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann Marie Macy is the "easy" type of girl who is continually imposed upon. Young and pretty, she dreams of a future as an artist, saving from her earnings by painting cards and working in her father's bookstore, but, as her selfish, flapper sisters, Alice and Jeanie, borrow her dresses for their own ends, so her brother, Howard, borrows her savings. The art course plan is shelved when Ann Marie uses the money in extricating Howard from an entangling alliance with Leota Ingram, the town's bad girl. Even her mother's pendant is pawned to pay Howard's fare to the West when he loses his bank job. Neal Forsythe, dashing Don Juan, visiting the wealthy Lawlers, wins Ann Marie's heart. Mrs. Lawler forbids her son to further accompany the Macy girls, calling them "night-time friends." Alice evens accounts by getting herself engaged to John Lawler. To celebrate, Johnny, Alice, Ann Marie, Neal, Jeanie and Brookie have a party at a roadhouse. Neal proposes to Ann Marie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXI.

ANN MARIE didn't know how to make herself pretty enough that afternoon.

She did her hair four times. She rubbed rouge and lipstick on her face and then washed it all off again.

"Could I borrow some of my own perfume?" she asked, going into Jeanie's room to get it.

But the bottle stood on Jeanie's dressing table, empty.

"Don't you dare stir out of this house without mixing up the batter for the waffles," said Jeanie, hard at work with a small contraption that was used for curling the eyelashes. "And please do set the table for the four of us. You always know how to do it so beautifully."

Ann Marie glowed. Praise always warmed her and made her happy.

"It might not be a bad idea to give Dad a couple of sandwiches and a cup of coffee before you go out," Jeanie went on. "Then he won't expect to eat with us four. It's a terrible bore to have him around when the boys are here."

"Well, if I have time—" Ann Marie half promised, with her eyes on her wristwatch. "Neal said he was coming right over."

But she had plenty of time, as it turned out. For Neal did not come until six.

"I'm one of those terrible people who are never on time—so you may as well get used to it," he said when he came into the hall, wearing one of Johnny Lawler's fur-collared driving coats and a pair of his gloves.

"I shall love getting used to it!" sighed Ann Marie, looking at him with eyes like blue stars. . . . Wonderful to get used to him and his ways! Wonderful to know that she was going to live with him all her life!—

She flew upstairs to get her hat and coat.

On her bed lay her handbag filled with two clean handkerchiefs, a box of powder, a small round mirror and an empty coin purse. Into the coin purse went the $5 bill—Ann Marie's half of the Dutch-treat money.

Seated in Johnny's roadster she took it out and rolled it up until it was about the size and shape of a cigaret.

The thought of giving it to Neal embarrassed her. . . . Surely it would be embarrassing to him, too, to take it from her.

Just as the roadster was turning in at the gates of Simonds' she took one of Neal's hands in hers and slipped the bill under his glove.

"Thanks!" His swift eyes flashed a smile at her. "You don't mind paying your half this way, do you?—Remember, it was your own idea—"

"Don't say that!" Ann Marie put her hand over his mouth as the car came to a stop under the low-hanging bare branches of a willow tree in the yard of the inn.

"I'm glad to pay my half! I think it's perfectly all right for a girl to share the expenses of a party with a man—especially when she works and earns money of her own the way I do."

Neal gave a wry little smile and opened the door of the car for her. "Especially when the man is too poor to pay for two—even at a hot-dog stand," he said quietly, and Ann Marie's heart ached for him.

What a shame that he should be so poor when a lot of other men, not nearly so fine and good looking and clever—Johnny Lawler, for instance—had more money than they needed.

"Don't you care," she said to him, and getting out of Johnny's roadster, she patted Neal's shoulder, covered as it was by Johnny's driving coat. "Don't you mind, Neal. . . . There'll come a day when you'll be the highest-priced illustrator in the country, and then you won't have to go fifty-fifty with me!"

"You bet you won't!" the man declared. "You'll have everything that the highest-priced illustrator in the country can buy for his wife!"

They went up the steps of the inn, arm in arm.

A roadhouse on a rainy Sunday can be the loneliest place under the sky.

And, on this particular Sunday evening, Neal and Ann Marie had the whole big dining room of Simonds' to themselves.

An old white-haired waiter, who knew that lovers want to be all by themselves, took them to a little table in the corner that overlooked the courtyard with its wet, blowing trees and its puddles that gleamed like silver in the light from the porch outside.

"Two club sandwiches, a pot of coffee and a package of Mustapha Royale cigarets," Neal gave his order.

Ann Marie never had heard of "Mustapha Royale" cigarets until the night before, when he had asked Johnny to order them for him. She had noticed that they were 75 cents a box.

"You don't smoke, do you?" he asked, when the waiter had brought them. "You don't realize what a treasure you are, Ann Marie, and what an economical wife you'll be! No cigarets and no liquor to buy for you!"

Ann Marie twinkled at him.

"Every time you say the word 'wife' to me, I lose my breath!" she said, and she was breathless and excited enough to prove it. "Oh, if you only knew how much I think of you, and how happy I am to be here with you!"

Right from the beginning she was more in love with him than he was with her. She had fallen in love the way she did everything else—generously, whole-heartedly and without stint.

She had given her heart away as she had always given away things—almost before it was asked for.

"Isn't this cozy?" she asked. "It's almost home-like to be here together, isn't it?"

It was. The corner was quiet and warm and cozy, with the rain hissing and gurgling outside, and the yellow lamp glowing on the table.

The food came, and Ann Marie poured the coffee from a fat round pot of German silver.

"I shall do this for you every day—after a while," she said, beaming at Neal through the steam and the blue smoke of his cigaret. "And isn't that the cutest little coffee pot you ever saw in your life? We shall have one just like it when we are—after a while."

She couldn't touch a mouthful of food for very happiness and excitement. She sat, glowing and quivering, and broke her sandwich to bits with nervous little fingers, chattering like a magpie.

"You know, I've been planning to go to New York for ever so long and live there, anyway," she said. "I had a lot of money saved up for it and then I—well, I had to lend it to someone. Too bad, wasn't it?"

Neal nodded, his mouth full of club sandwich.

"But I'll soon have some more saved up," she went on, her eyes dancing like blue butterflies. "I get $3 a dozen for the place cards I make. Only in a town like this there aren't so many people who order them. If I were in New York I know I could get a lot of work to do."

"Why don't you go up there some day and ask for work at one of the big book stores?" asked Neal, puffing smoke at the ceiling. "I know a shop down in Greenwich Village that sells your sort of stuff, too—"

"Oh, do you?" Ann Marie fairly bubbled. "Just think! If I could be sure of some money right from the start in New York, I wouldn't have to have so much saved up before I start, would I?"

Neal shook his dark, sleek head.

"No. I wish I could lend you what you need. But I can't," he said in a melancholy way. "I suppose I'm not much of a man to say this—but even our getting married depends on you. Because you'll have to stand on your own feet, in a money way, for a while. The plain truth is that I can't marry a girl unless she's willing to support herself."

"This girl is," answered Ann Marie in a low tone, looking down at the tablecloth.

She was ashamed to look at him as she said it. . . . It sounded as if she were asking him to marry her, and she knew it.

It sounded like Dickens' "Barkis is willin'."

The waiter brought the bill presently, and Ann Marie couldn't help seeing how much it was—$3.50.

She could not help seeing that the $5 bill that Neal laid upon the tray with it was the $5 bill that she had given him. It was rolled into the shape of a cigaret.

When the change came Neal put a dollar into his pocket and left the silver for the waiter.

For an instant Ann Marie wondered why he had not split the bill and given her back the $3 that were coming to her.

"He's forgotten that we're making this 'Dutch treat,'" she decided as they walked out of the dining room. "He's forgotten that that was my money he paid the bill with."

The rain had stopped and the moon swam in the dark sky like a golf fish in a pool of blue-black water. . . . It was very dark under the willow tree where Johnny's roadster was parked.

"Look here," said Neal, and when she turned to him, he took her in his arms, pressing her so close to him that he hurt her. He kissed her until she was breathless and dizzy. . . . Oh, she never was really sure that he loved her until a moment like this one came along. Never really sure of him when they sat talking. His gray eyes seemed so cold, sometimes. Once or twice they had made Ann Marie think of Mrs. Lawler's hard, calculating eyes.

"But that's just a family resemblance," she had decided.

Certainly there was nothing hard and cold and calculating about him now as he held her tight and murmured into her hair and covered her face and neck with kisses.

They got into the car.

It was warm and dark inside, with the side curtains closing them in as if they were in a cave.

"Here's something for you," Neal said, and Ann Marie held out her hand, expecting him to give her the $3 that were left over from her share of the "Dutch treat" money.

Instead her hand touched something smooth and cold and round. Her other hand closed round it. . . . It was the little fat silver coffee pot from the restaurant!

HE SUFFERED FOR TEN YEARS

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Relief in 2 Months — Doctor Recommended It

Constipation is dreaded not only for its own insidious self, but because of the many serious conditions and diseases it causes. Mr. Lind was a sufferer—but read how he found relief.

"For the past 10 years I have suffered from piles. At times I have been unable to work. I have tried suppositories, ointments, etc., but to no avail.

"Two months ago my grocer called my attention to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I began taking it regularly. Immediately the pain and annoyance from the piles was relieved. I found that it requires very little ALL-BRAN to give nature a fair chance to effect a cure."—WALTER J. LIND, R. 2, Box 137, Appleton, Wis.

Don't neglect constipation. At any time its poisons may take terrible toll from your health and well-being. Protect yourself. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly—two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. ALL-BRAN brings sure, natural relief. It is what doctors call a bulk food. It sweeps the intestine clean and stimulates normal action.

Ready-to-eat with milk or cream. Also try the recipes on the package. Results guaranteed. Doctors recommend it because it is 100% bran. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Served in hotels, restaurants, and dining cars. Sold by all grocers.

"Invaluable" Say Society Women

MELLO-GLO Face Powder is preferred by beautiful women because it leaves no trace of flakiness, pastiness or irritation. Stays on longer—no shiny noses! Made by a new French process—prevents large pores. Spreads more smoothly—gives a youthful bloom. Very pure. Use MELLO-GLO Face Powder. It's wonderful.

Corns

Instant relief with positive safety

No risk of acid burn as with harsh liquids and plasters. Avoids danger of blood poisoning from cutting your corns.

It's utterly impossible for corns to hurt once Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are applied. The whole idea is scientific. The soothing medication stops the pain, and heals, while the protective action of Zino-pads removes the cause. Result is a revelation.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are thin, dainty, cushioning, absolutely safe, sure. Doctors recommend them. Won't come off while bathing. Also sizes for Callouses and Bunions. At all Drug, Shoe and Dept. stores—35c box.

Fall Series of Dance Music On Air Tonight

DANCING on the air will become more than a mere figure of speech when the Burns Panatela Country Club inaugurates a fall series of dance broadcasts tonight. These programs will be radiocast by WJAS each Monday evening at 10 o'clock.

The orchestra chosen for this program is Gene Ormandy's. It is composed of 20 artists especially selected and trained for their ability with dancy rhythm. They have been practicing all summer with special emphasis on unusual fox trot tempos.

Another distinctive feature of this new broadcast series will be the incorporation of brief talks by celebrities in the field of sports, chiefly amateur athletics. The first speaker will be William H. "Big Bill" Edwards, who as captain of the championship Princeton eleven in 1899, set a record for fast, consistent playing which stands to this day. Edwards is expected to talk on football as a sport, both amateur and professional, and as he has kept up his interest in the game even though more than a quarter century has passed since his active participation, has an interesting message.

Buck and Wing, the small-time vaudeville team whose career is just one thing after another, have just completed a six weeks' engagement in London, as night club entertainers, and have accepted an offer of an English airplane concern to fly back to America. The audience of WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock will hear them as they are about to "take off" in London. Buck is not enthusiastic over the flight, but Wing hopes to gain enough publicity from the venture to put them in the headlines when they land in America.

An ambitious program of dramatic music, including the overture to "Orpheus," by Offenbach, and "Vorspiel," from Wagner's "Parsifal," balance the rhythmic movements by Tschaikowsky, Chopin and Wolf-Ferrari, which Hugo Mariani and the White House Orchestra will broadcast through KDKA at 8:30 o'clock. This program will be one of the outstanding features of the evening.

We Now Present

Virginia Harmon, attractive WCAE artist, participated last Wednesday evening in the "Housewarmer's" program from WCAE. One selection she did particularly well, and on which she received many telephone calls was "Little Yaller Dog." Evidently Miss Harmon had lost her "yaller dog" and was sending out a plea for his return—or so the song goes! Nevertheless Virginia was called to the telephone and informed the caller was willing to return the "yaller dog."

Frank Kaltenborn, orchestra conductor and violin virtuoso, makes his bow to NBC listeners Friday night, September 10, in the Master Musicians program. Kaltenborn is a pioneer of summer night music in New York, leader of a symphonic string quaret bearing his name and is known to music lovers for his many years' service on the Mall, Central Park.

A laugh in a Gospel Song Hour is not to be expected, but those listening to WCAE carefully several weeks ago might have heard the announcer say 'The next number 'In the Hour of Trial' will be sung by our baritone."

Edwin Whitney and Darriel Jones, production experts for NBC, are joint discoveries of the world's loudest voice. During recent auditions at the studios a feminine applicant boasted: "All my friends say my voice is unusually good for radio. Why, the last time I broadcast they heard my voice in Valparaiso, Chile."

CHARLIE MACK TO BUILD TOWN AND PLANS TO CALL IT TIERRA DEL CUERVO

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

(Copyright, 1929, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 9.

CHARLIE MACK, of Moran and Mack fame, isn't satisfied with being the boss of the Mack trunk kump. He hankers for larger business fields to conquer and believe you me this time he has picked a honey.

It happened when he went a-visiting Bill Hart at Bill's ranch above Newhall, a lively spin from the village. Mack fell for the country. Figured the foothills elegant. It occurred to him that mebbe 'twould be a good idea to build a town of his own.

Whereupon, after dickering and conferences, he purchased a number of acres in Newhall. He has decided to call his town Tierra Del Cuervo—Spanish for Two Black Crows! The first house is being built. Harry Green, the comedian, got a look at it. Mack sold it to him. Harry says it's a frame-up, but by now it should be a house.

This Head Crow man isn't so dumb.

Anyway, I heard it. That the Fox Exeks requested Stepin Fetchit to go to San Francisco to personal appearance with "Salute," wherein he is featured with George O'Brien and Helen Chandler. It may be the terrifically hot weather and then again it may be just plain sinemaetis. But Fetchit is reported as saying he'd go, provided the kumpny plunked over $3,000. The kumpny, in turn, is reported as replying that isn't the kinda plunking they do under such conditions. Whether they will illustrate later for Fetchit's edification remains to be "heard."

Arlen Featured In Conrad Story

WILLIAM WELLMAN is to megaphone Dick Arlen and Nancy Carroll in Joseph Conrad's powerful story, "Victory." The flick was made years ago, direction Maurice Tourneur, with Seena Owen as the girl; Jack Holt, the man; Wallie Beery, the disgusting German, and Lon Chaney in some character or other.

Lon Chaney

Speaking of Chaney, he's still having trouble with his throat, and will have to undergo another operation soon. After which he is to rest for several weeks.

Al Dubin, who writes songs for the Vitaphone Bros., dashed off "A cup of coffee, a sandwich and you" a coupla years ago. He did pretty good by this hit. Yeah, he got the idea from Omah Kayam's line: "A loaf of bread, a jug of wine, and thou." Just a matter of being smart.

WOODS AFLAME, PLIGHT GRAVE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Forest fires scattered over an area 600 miles square in Minnesota threatened to spread over a wider territory while forestry department officials continued to impress labor into the ranks of fire fighting crews.

There were no indications of rain in the Woods County, where between 40,000 and 60,000 acres of peat and timberlands are aflame, and forest rangers feared the fires would spread to vast stretches of other timber stands if the present dry weather continues. Killing frosts have also aggravated the situation.

Nearly 50 men have been drafted for fire duty to augment the crew of nearly 250 men combatting the flames along fire lines which stretch over a front of about 250 miles.

A forestry official, carrying out orders of Grover M. Conzet, state forester, has been "picking up" men for fire duty. Those who refuse to go are threatened with arrest under a state law which provides for a fine up to $100. A similar penalty can be imposed against men who refuse to work when transported to the fire scene.

Conzet charges that the forest fires were caused by settlers in an effort to clear lands for agricultural purposes. Resentment against forestry officials who have sought to put a stop to this practice, has seriously handicapped fire wardens in their efforts to control the flames.

Terrorists Blamed For Bomb at Fair

Nichols Comedy And Plays of Next Weeks

Beginning tonight, the attraction in the Pitt, presented by the George Sharp Players, augmented by importations, is to be Anne Nichols' comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose." There will be the usual Thursday and Saturday matinees.

Next week the George Sharp Players will have another prominent actress as guest star, Frances Starr, who will appear in "The Constant Wife."

The Nixon is to open for the new season next Monday, when the attraction will be "The Red Robe," romantic play with music, adapted from the novel "Under the Red Robe." Walter Woolf will head the company. Matinees will be Wednesday and Saturday.

WILL DISCUSS SMOKE EVIL

The Community Association of Mt. Lebanon, organized to promote the general welfare of the community, has called a special meeting for tomorrow evening in the Lincoln School, Ralston place and Beverly road. The committee, recently appointed by H. O. McGrth, president, has arranged for two well known combustion engineers to deliver addresses on "Smoke Abatement." The public is invited to attend and hear the discussion on the economic use of coal and the elimination of the smoke nuisance.

Police Seeking Two Jailbreakers

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 9.—Police throughout the tri-state district are searching for Melvin and Otto Neff, of Wellsburg, W. Va., who escaped from jail at Burgettstown, where they had been placed following arrest by Wellsburg authorities, charged with the robbery of the "Doc" Boles' home at Eldersville, Pa., the larceny of an automobile belonging to James Riddle, of Eldersville, and the holdup of a lumber camp, near the state line between Hamlin Station and Colliers, W. Va.

A woman told officials she saw two young men answering the description of the pair walking down the railroad tracks from Burgettstown towards Raccoon.

Covey of Quail Welcome State Sportsmen

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 9.—Greene county members of the Izaak Walton League were certain of the success of the state convention to be staged here today and Tuesday when a covey of quail flew into town and lighted on the lawn of a home in South Washington street.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The one hundredth anniversary of the Elk Branch Presbyterian Church at Duffields, near here, was celebrated yesterday. The stone edifice was built in 1829.

3 IN FAMILY DIE AS BOAT UPSETS

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—A week-end fishing party had a tragic ending here with the drowning of three persons, when a motor boat capsized on the Colorado River.

F. J. Bryant, 24, his wife, Gladys Bryant, 22, and their baby boy, Freddie James Bryant, Jr., 3, all of Austin, lost their lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bryant, also on the boat, were rescued by Frank Gullette, and a youth whose name was not learned.

SPEED FLIERS SEEK RECORD

CALSHOT, England, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—British seaplanes, which set a new world record for speed in the Schneider Cup races, will make a fresh assault on all speed records tomorrow.

Flying Officer R. L. R. Atcherley, although he was disqualified in the race, attained a speed of 332.49 miles an hour, well over the previous record of 318.43 set by Maj. Mario De Bernhardi, last year. Old marks must be exceeded by five miles an hour to be allowed as a new speed record.

Squadron Leader A. H. Orelabar, was expected to make the first attempt with the same seaplane in which Flying Officer H. R. D. Waghorn won the race. Flight Lieut. G. H. Stainforth will make a test flight in a Gloster Napier 6 which could not be got ready in time for the race and if the test is satisfactory will also have a try at the record.

TONIC QUALITIES OF KONJOLA ARE HIGHLY PRAISED

Pittsburgher Says He Eats Better, Sleeps Better, Has Gained 12 Lbs., Since Taking New Medicine.

Still they come—enthusiastic indorsements of the new and different medicine, Konjola, from all sections of Pittsburgh and all surrounding communities. Only a medicine of outstanding merit, a medicine that makes good, would such vast numbers of Pittsburgh men and women voluntarily indorse and enthusiastically praise.

MR. LOUIS LA LONDE

Among recent indorsements of this new medicine is one from Mr. Louis La Londe, who lives at 1236 Sheffield Street, Pittsburgh, who called upon a Konjola Man a short time ago to praise the tonic qualities of Konjola. There are two Konjola Men in Pittsburgh; one at the Dow drug store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street; the other at the Dow drug store (formerly McCulloch's), Diamond and Smithfield Streets, this city. Call upon either for full information about this remarkable compound which has become the most talked-of medicine in the nation. Read Mr. La Londe's statement, which provides an excellent example of Konjola in action against the causes of a run-down condition:

"I owe a great deal to Konjola, for it has made life seem worth living again. This wonderful tonic has strengthened and built me up in every way. Before I started taking Konjola I was in a badly weakened condition. For several years my appetite had been poor and my sleep restless. I hardly knew what it was to get a good night's sleep. I was bothered by night sweats that would leave me exhausted, and I became very nervous and irritable. I never ate any breakfast, for I never felt like doing so. I lost weight and seemed to have no ambition for my work. The days seemed very long and I had to force myself to work.

"Recently I was doing some remodeling in one of Dow's drug stores and I got to talking with the manager about my condition. He suggested that I try Konjola and I did so. In less than a month I was sleeping soundly, without night sweats, and eating my meals with relish. It was two months ago that I started to take Konjola, and in that time I have gained back 12 pounds of my lost weight. I feel better in every way. Work seems a pleasure to me and the days seem short. I had tried several other tonics before I started on Konjola, but none of them gave me results as Konjola did. I can sincerely recommend this medicine to all who need something to build up their strength and energy."

In addition to its virtues as a super-tonic, Konjola has built up an amazing record of accomplishment in the relief of disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

There is a Konjola Man at the Dow drug store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, and another at the Dow drug store (formerly McCulloch's), Diamond and Smithfield Streets, Pittsburgh. There also is a Konjola Man at Dow's drug store, 5939 Penn Avenue, East Liberty. All are daily introducing and explaining the merits of this modern medicine.

SALES OF PROGRESS

A Greater Frank & Seder Store In the Making

Contractors are working night and day to get the three upper floors of the Grand Theater Building ready for us.

These floors will be directly connected with our present store, and will enable us to make long needed improvements in service and merchandising departments.

When the extensive alterations are completed, we shall open a large and complete Furniture Department, which will offer the same unusual values in furniture as the public has long been accustomed to find in other departments at Frank & Seder.

In the meantime, we are offering special prices to reduce those stocks of merchandise which later on will have to be moved and re-located.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Pittsburgh Society Folk Returning to Open Fall Season Here

SOCIETY folks are very busy these first fall days closing their summer homes, and when they arrive in Pittsburgh they are very busy opening their winter homes, and greeting their friends just back, too, from summer resorts. In a few weeks more, when Pittsburgh society will be well represented at home again, all these teas and dinners and balls we've been hearing about will begin to take place.

One of the debutantes who'll make her bow this winter, Katherine Harkness Edwards, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards, will be home from East Hampton in several weeks, I hear. Dr. Edwards already has returned, but Mrs. Edwards is with her daughter.

On Sunday Mrs. John Crossan Dilworth, of Bennington avenue, will return from Jackson Hole, Wyo., where she's been enjoying ranch life all summer. Mrs. Dilworth is one of the popular hostesses of Pittsburgh society.

And did you know that the A. K. Olivers are home from Eaglesmere? They and their family have been there all summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Faber Brooks are also home from Ahmic Lake, Canada, where they have been prominent members of the colony.

Mrs. George Faber Downey, Jr., has left Southampton, I hear, where she's been seen all summer at social events.

Before returning home the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Maitland Alexander, who have been summering at Dark Harbor, Me., will spend a few days this week in New York.

A FEW families will stay late into September at their summer homes because of weddings or other society events of extraordinary interest.

The Robert Baylor Woolfolks, of Bartlett street, won't be back in the city until late September or early October, for on Saturday, September 21, their daughter, Mary Caldwell Woolfolk, will become the bride of John Russell Norton, the son of the Howard Nortons, of Newton, Mass. The wedding will take place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon in the Woolfolk summer home at Cohassett, Mass.

Virginia Woolfolk will be her sister's only attendant and Wilmont Kennedy Bell, of New York, will be best man. The ushers will be Leroy Albert Page, Jr., of New York; Benjamin Townsend Fawcett, of Newton, Mass.; Lewis Covell Copeland, of Northampton, Mass., and Charles R. Todd, of Ashmont, Mass.

NEWS has reached us that Mrs. Henry W. Rea, of "Fair Acres," Sewickley Heights, is at Marienbed, Germany, for several weeks.

The J. Keese Hallocks, of Sewickley, are spending the early days of September at Atlantic City. At the shore, too, is Philip M. Norvell.

MISS HELEN ELIZABETH DONAHOE, daughter of P. J. Donahoe, of Stanton Heights, has chosen October 10 as the date for her marriage to Paul A. McCrory, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. McCrory, of Knoxville. The ceremony will be performed at 9 o'clock in St. Raphael's Catholic Church by the Rev. Leo McCrory, brother of the bridegroom. Miss Frances M. Kraus will be maid of honor, and Jack Davis, of Carnegie, is to be best man. A breakfast in the Donahoe home will follow the ceremony.

* * *

MISS DORIS SAURMAN, daughter of Atlee B. Saurman, of Clearwater, Fla., formerly of Pittsburgh, whose marriage to John Musgrave, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Musgrave, of North Negley avenue, will be solemnized Saturday night at 6 o'clock in the bride's home, will have her sister, Miss Frances W. Saurman, for her maid of honor. The flower girl will be Dorothy Nettles, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robbins Nettles, of Clearwater. Dudley S. Saurman is to be best man. Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave will make their home in Pittsburgh.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE ALBERT WALLACE, of Linden place, Bellevue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mabel Lucille Wallace, and Wilmer Joseph Shadle, son of Mrs. Anna Shadle, of Leechburg, which was solemnized Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the First United Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr. A breakfast for the families followed the ceremony in the Highland Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Shadle are motoring in the South and after October 1 will be at home in Leechburg.

THE wedding of Miss Elizabeth Liddell Donnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva M. Donnell, of Jackson street, and Clayton J. Pinkerton, of Ingomar, took place today at 12:45 o'clock in Calvary Episcopal Church, with the Rev. C. Ronald Carmey, officiating. The bride wore beige lace over chiffon made with an uneven hem line, and a picture hat of beige lace, and carried talisman roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. George Mehaffey, as matron of honor, appeared in shell pink chiffon with a hat of blue straw and lace, and carried pink roes. Kenneth M. Pinkerton was his brother's best man and the ushers included John Dickson Fulton and William Donnell, brother of the bride. A luncheon in the Wildwood Country Club followed the ceremony, with covers laid for 14 at the bridal table, which was decorated with fall flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton will take a motor trip to Florida and after October 15 will be at home in Elgin avenue.

SATURDAY evening at 7:30 o'clock, the marriage of Miss Helen Dillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dillman, of Bellevue, and William Walker, of Bellevue and Cumberland, Md., son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Walker, of Bellevue, was solemnized in the Dillman home by the Rev. Dr. D. F. Hankey. The bride wore ivory satin with a tulle veil held with orange blossome and pearls, and carried a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Elizabeth Walker, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, appearing in a period frock of green taffeta with tulle flounces, while the bridesmaid, Miss Elizabeth Dillman, sister of the bride, wore a similarly made frock in orchid. They carried dahlias. Joseph Stewart, of Canton, O., was best man and William Caldwell was usher. After a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Walker left for a motor trip through the Cumberland Valley.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. FRANK CONWAY, of Clairton, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marguerite Donahoe, and Walter Piper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piper, of Elizabeth, which was solemnized April 19, in Elizabeth.

Head of G. A. R. Raps Neglect of Shrines

FRANKLIN, Pa., Sept. 9.—Philip Engleskirger, state commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, arrived in Portland, Maine, today for the national encampment sessions, and on behalf of this state, to lodge a protest against a neglect in the upkeep of battlefields and monuments at Gettysburg. Particularly will he refer to the neglect of the state memorial, now weatherbeaten and with the grass surrounding it uncut for weeks at a time.

The program for the evening will be presented by the program committee, of which Mrs. W. V. Foust is chairman, and Mrs. Paul Wright, Mrs. William L. Murphy and Mrs. William T. Everett her aides.

MISS GENEVIEVE CAREY, junior president of the Oakmont Woman's Club; Mrs. J. H. Patients Taken To New Hospital

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Elizabeth Jameson McCreary, daughter of the late David Jameson, on Saturday unlocked the doors of the Jameson Memorial Hospital and formally opened the new institution. Miss Laura Stevenson was the first patient admitted. Fifty-five patients of the Shenango Valley Hospital were transferred to the new institution.

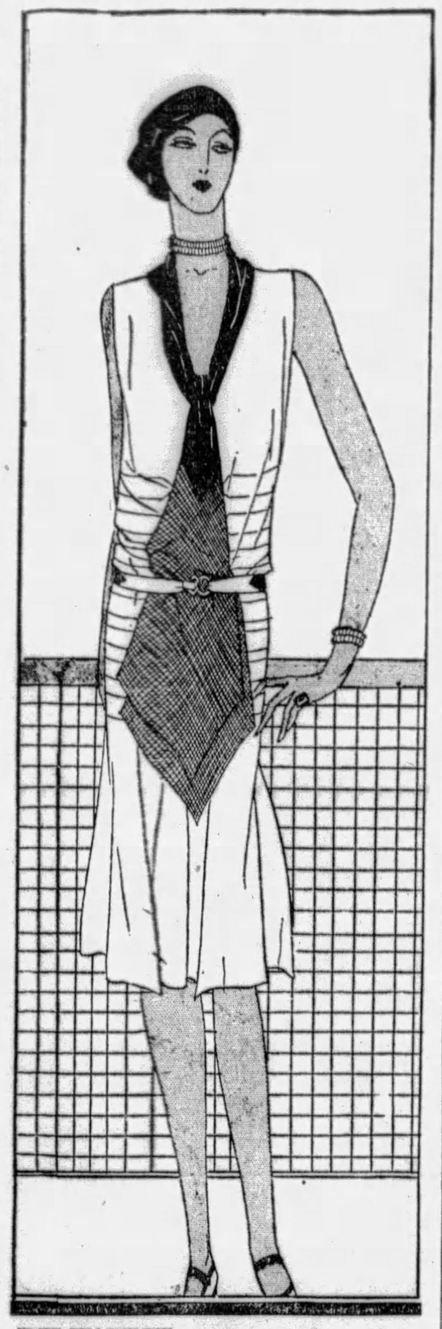
Meadville Pastor Retires From Pulpit

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The Rev. Dr. D. A. Platt, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church here for the past five years, preached his farewell sermon last night. He will retire from the ministry and live in Clarion.

FASHION'S BEST OFFERINGS FOR SUMMER'S FINAL DAYS

Sketched in Paris

BY CHANEL—Frock of white toile, set off by polka dotted black and white crepe knotted at collar and waist. Note the sleeveless bodice and circular skirt held closely in at hips.



BY WORTH—Crepe de chine frock. Skirt of loose panels over a straight underskirt. Scarf of blue and red crepe, caught beneath belt of crepe, with touches of blue and red at sides.

STYLISTS DECREE SLEEVELESS FROCK FOR RESORT WEAR

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Sept. 8.—You cannot wear your heart on your sleeve this season, during the daytime anyway, however delightful your companion or romantic your surroundings.

For fashion has ordained that the most delightful frocks designed for resort wear shall be sleeveless. And so it behooves every woman to see that her arms are clear-skinned and free from superfluous flesh and blemishes.

It really is remarkable how the mode contributes its share to creating and maintaining a standard of physical perfection. This is but one phase of the absorbing psychology of the modern trend in dress.

THE polka dot goes on merrily dancing through the ateliers of the dress designers here. It has left its imprint on some of the most delightful dresses of the season. It is especially popular and effective when used as trimming or on a scarf. Blue and white, black and white, and blue with yellow or red have been the most successful polka dot combinations that have been observed at the various holiday resorts.

CHANEL, who has launched so many exotic fashions, is equally at home in creating simple clothes, and so we have had sketched for you a charming little frock designed by her and worn by a very energetic young lady on the sporty golf course at Le Touquet.

The frock is of white toile, which is effectively set off by the polka dotted black and white crepe that is knotted at the collar and the waistline. The sleeveless bodice is in one piece with the circular skirt, the latter closely held in at the hips by parallel rows of stitching.

White crepe de chine was used to fashion it, and proves an attractive background for the interesting scarf of blue and red crepe that adorns it. The scarf is extremely wide at the ends and is caught beneath a belt of crepe with touches of blue and red at the sides. Several parallel bands of the material are appliqued just above and below the belt. The skirt is composed of loose panels over a straight underskirt.

Both of these dresses represent the very last word in vacation wear.

LINA BASQUETTE has ivory-smooth skin

Movie Directors Say Lovely Skin Wins

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—"Beautiful skin is absolutely necessary for a girl's popularity and loveliness," says Howard Higgins, Pathé director, and agrees with leading movie directors. "I don't remember a girl's ever reaching screen stardom without a rarely lovely skin."

Lina Basquette, Pathé star, knows that there is no charm without lovely skin. She is one of the 442 important Hollywood actresses who keep their skin exquisite with Lux Toilet Soap. "This white, fragrant soap has all the charm of an imported French soap," she says. "And it leaves my skin so beautifully smooth!"

Nine out of ten screen stars use this soap, and all the great film studios have made it the official soap for their dressing rooms.

MOTHERS CLUB OPENS SEASON

The first fall meeting of the Mothers Club of Carrick will be held Wednesday, the date having been postponed because of the absence from the city of many members. Mrs. John Rosson, the outgoing president will present the gavel to the new leader, Mrs. Robert Schneider. A program of "Summer Echoes" will be presented by Mrs. John Semmelrock, Mrs. Louis Grella, Mrs. W. H. McCombs, Mrs. Oscar Graf, Mrs. Howard H. Barker, and Mrs. William J. Krauss. Mrs. William Aszman and Mrs. Walter Hartman will be hostesses. The trustees and directors will meet preceding the regular session.

Missionary Circle Meets at Avalon

The Young Women's Missionary Society, Avalon United Presbyterian Church, will meet tomorrow night in the home of Mrs. J. W. Caughey, 6600 Virginia avenue, Avalon. Devotional services will be conducted by Mrs. W. B. Park. Miss Nora Eamsey will discuss home missions.

Methodists Open Erie Conference

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The ninety-fourth session of the Erie conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, will convene here tomorrow. Bishop Charles L. Mead, of Denver, will preside.

How You Should Register

By MRS. DELLA B. HERSHEY, Director, Allegheny County League of Women Voters.

LESSON NO. 12.

If you were not one of the 56,000 men and women who registered last Thursday, be sure to register tomorrow. It is the second day to qualify for participation in the primary election. You must have a tax receipt to register. You can get that receipt by going to the office of the Delinquent Tax Collector, Court House. If you want a friend to get your receipt give him an order reading, "I do hereby authorize ..... to pay any occupation, poll or county tax assessed against me in the .... district, ... Ward, Pittsburgh, for state or county purposes for the year 1928." Be sure to sign your name, address and occupation.

W. C. T. U. FETES MRS. GEORGE

A banquet tomorrow night in honor of Dr. Ella M. George, retiring state president, will feature the first of a two-day session of the fifty-fifth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of the Allegheny County in the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue.

The opening address tomorrow morning will be made by Mrs. Elizabeth J. Gibson, president of the county organization. In the afternoon officers will be elected and reports of committees received. Mrs. S. R. B. Stewart, superintendent of legislative and Christian citizenship, will speak Wednesday.

CHURCH PLANS CONCLAVE

The Wilkinsburg United Brethren church has completed arrangements for the Allegheny Conference for the United Brethren in Christ, which convenes in that church September 18.

This conference will be the first held in Wilkinsburg since 1895 and 200 delegates are expected to attend. Bishop G. D. Batdorf will preside and the Rev. Earl C. Weaver, pastor of the church, will act as host to the conference. A highly diversified program has been arranged by those in charge of making plans for the conclave.

Don't Drink if You'd Avoid Seasickness

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—To avoid seasickness, in the opinion of Dr. B. Sydney Jones, chief surgeon of the Aquitania, one should take precautions against hyperacidity for a week before a voyage. Bon voyage parties and champagne aboard are likely to bring on the ailment. About to retire after 36 hrs at sea the doctor has a treatment which he has found 99 per cent successful.

New York Begins Memorial Highway

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—When Gov. Roosevelt arrives at the village of Wilmington Wednesday a motor caravan will follow his automobile up the four-mile slope of Whiteface Mountain and at the top of the climb the Governor will be asked to turn the first shovelful of earth for the new Whiteface highway, a memorial to New York state men who served in the World War.

Church Celebrates 62nd Anniversary

Special services yesterday marked the opening of the sixty-second anniversary celebration at the Denny Methodist Episcopal Church, Thirty-fourth and Ligonier streets. A feature of the services was the music and singing in charge of Ruth Bingham, choir leader. Services were in charge of the Rev. Albert G. Curry, pastor.

Carrick High Will Reopen Night School

The Carrick Evening High School, after a summer of inactivity, will resume classes next Monday with an enrollment expected to exceed that of all other years. Registrations will be made Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. The courses to be taught will be similar to those of other years.

GIRL DIES IN VAIN RESCUE EFFORT

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Olive Backway, 16, of Harbor Creek, and Cecila Owens, 22, of Erie, who attempted to rescue the Backway girl, were drowned in Lake Erie at North Pier. Miss Owen, who was standing on the pier in her bathing suit when the Harbor Creek swimmer went down, went to her rescue. She was seen to dive for the Backway girl and neither came up.

It was believed that Miss Owens was pulled under by Miss Backway when the former tried to bring her to the surface. The lake was rough and it was several hours before the bodies were recovered.

Miss Owens was a daughter of Patrick Owens, first assistant keeper of the government lighthouse at North Pier.

has gone a-trekking, vacation bound. But 'twon't be for long.

Bessie Love

Bessie must report for grease paint duty pretty soon in Van & Schenck's initial vocalloid, "Take It Big." . . Nancy Welford, who will screen bow in "The Gold Diggers," has leased a home in Laurel Canyon. . . . Lew Cody's health is so vastly improved that he can take short trips when he darn pleases. Lew visited friends in La Jolla over the week-end. . . . Bob Armstrong motoring to a lil' town nearby to get his wife outta jail. Um, she was arrested for speeding. . . . With the thermometer gone absolutely crazy, the James Gleasons staggered into scenes for "The Shannons of Broadway" wearing ankle length coonskin coats buttoned to the throat! . . . Lili Damiti, the French actress, is enroute to ye village. . . . And—that's all.

Walter Winchell—On Broadway

This Town of Ours 11 Years Ago

(With a nod to Dayton Stoddard.)

HEYWOOD BROUN squawked all the way from France this wk when the Hurld-Trib ran Floyd Gibbons' war stuff over his own. . . . Nothing happened. . . . Frisco, the maple massager on the Ziegfeld Roof, gets $75 per wk, which is half more than the fifty he got every Satdee at Rector's. . . . The mob along the Stem don't know whether to hiss or hammer him. . . . Russ Brown was handed a medal the other day by King George's proxy for carrying a stretcher in Flanders under heavy fire. . . . There's gab about another picture barn on Broadway. . . . As though the Rialto, Rivoli and Strand aren't plenty. . . . The smart crowd hang out at the Claridge these days. . . . Even Wilson Mizner gets bowed to. . . . "Friendly Enemies" at the Hudson looks like a hit. . . . Frank Carter has the tremors for Marilyn Miller.

HERRING AND PUBLICITY

Walter Kingsley and Miles Price had a couple of blond herring on the Ziegfeld Frolic last Friday. . . . Will A. Page is that way about Jessie Reed. . . . The casualty lists are getting hot. . . . Another prominent star grabbed a load of free publicity by buying oodles of Liberty Bonds (phoney). . . . Court Dimes threw an orgy at his Long Beach villa during the week-end. . . . Plenty of wine and Ann Pennington and Dolores, but no Edna Purviance. . . . Ren Wolf just grabbed the job of being Kelcey Allen's first press agent, as if he needed one, the buttonholer! . . . Alex Woollcott is vacationing in Paree. . . . Leo Michel is holding the pieces of Harry Fox's heart broken by Janszieka Deutsch (Jennie Dolly). . . . Elsie Ferguson, the leading lady, and Tom Clarke will have it Reno-vated.

Flo Ziegfeld is wearing blue shirts these days. . . . If he didn't that would be news. . . . He says this "Follies" will be his last because the actors hog all the salaries and production costs have rocketed. . . . Walter Winchell, the hoofer, is laying off again, and is holding out for more dough and billing from Pantages. . . . The boys are making book at the Frolic that Lillian Lorraine falls out of the swing in the "Swinging Along" number. . . . Bert Williams' dinner is a Bert Williams' stew, a thick soup he eats at Joel's, and is the only au fait allowed in there. . . . A femme star is cuh-razy over her leading man, while her husband waits patiently for her to come to her senses. . . . Al Mace and Annette, of the Century Roof, are romancing. . . . Here's a good stock tip: Watch General Motors.

WINE SIX BITS—TOUGH!

CAROLYN NUNDER is cooing with a title who comes nightly to the Century Roof to get an eyeful. . . . Chateau Yquem has gone up to $1.75 at Mouquin's and the boys are burning because they can't get a pint of good wine less than six bits. . . . What dramatic editor threw his gal's shoes outta the window last Thursdee when he Got Wise to Himself? . . . Whatever became of Texas Guinan? . . . Gil Boag is struggling along with his liquid delicatessen biz at the Moulin Rouge. . . . Vincent Astor's check at the Frolic last Chewsday was only $625. . . . Frank Wilstach is press-agenting the Winter Garden, trailing Ben Atwell. . . . Barney O'Shaughnessy looks bulgy in a white navy suit. . . . British actors are enlisting fast. . . . They've got to. . . . Lots of the lads are promoting soft jobs in the Navy, wrecking typewriters at 280 B'way or at Pelham.

Kitty Gordon's new gown shows her back all the way down to here. . . . A lot of the boys are catching cold feet from the draft. . . . Irv Berlin is writing the chunes for "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," the soldier opera at Camp Upton. . . . There is chatter about opening up a Chink garbage dispensary somewhere on B'way, fancy! . . . Jim Churchill laughed right out loud. . . . Reggie de Koven likes to gaze at the King Cole painting in the Knickerbocker bar over a Scotch-and-Soda. . . . After seven years of society Margaret Lawrence is returning to the Maxine Elliott in "Tea for Three" next month. . . . Variety still has a green cover and Freddie Schader has two teeth, none new.

BERT AND HIS POKER

RECOMMENDED to slummers: Doc O'Connell's dry martinis at the Astor bar. . . . Bert Williams' poker pantomime at the New Amsterdam. . . . Joe Smith and his crew of rag-timers at the Plaza tea dances. . . . Twilight dinner at the Claremont near Grant's Tomb. . . . Frank Fay warbling "On the Level, You're a Little Devil" at the Winter Garden. . . . Frank Tinney's adlib with the orchestra leader at the Alhambra. . . . The free cheese at the Manhattan bar. . . . Ojen cocktails at the Hermitage . . . and Al Jolson's "Why Do They Take the Night Boat to Albany, and Then the First Train to New York?" a double-entendre song if ever there was one.

Mae West and Harry Richman are breaking in a new routine. . . . Peggy Joyce has a new diamond bracelet that would knock your eye out. . . . They got calloused mitts applauding Clifton Crawford at the Palace last week with his "Gungha Din" and "Charge of the Light Brigade." . . . Harry Kemp never wears a hat. . . . The Dubonnet and Geneva gin at the World bar is a swell pickmeup. . . . Bobby Edwards is still playing the small-time warbling: "Way Down South in Greenwich Village, Where the Spinsters Come for Thrillage." . . . Caruso favors the spaghetti on Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, which is torn up something terrible, again. . . . Have you lamped that Olive Thomas yet? What orbs!

FUNNY BUT OUTSIDE

THE sheiks are trying to keep their hair glossy like Owen Moore's . . . Fred Allene, the juggler, is looking for next week. He says the funniest things in front of the Palace and somebody ought to wise him up to do that stuff on the stage and maybe he'll get in the Palace . . . Phil Baker and Ben Bernie are on the Orpheum Circuit . . . S. Jay Kaufman is getting locals to do his column in the Evetelly for him so he can vacation . . . Gilbert Seldes is "In The Army Now!" . . . They never heard of Frank Ward O'Malley up at the Ziegfeld Frolic the other night and wouldn't let him in. Such is fame! . . . An ordinary reporter from his own sheet had to vouch for him, haw! . . . Central Park is closed at midnight and the Germans appear to be hollering uncle, a little.

Morrie Ryskind, who writes snappy verse for F. P. A.'s column was expelled yesterday from Columbia for making fun of Nicholas Murray Butler . . . E. E. Cummings is in a French prison . . . Philip Goodman has started a mag called The Retail Ad News . . . You can get two cocktails for a quarter at the McAlpin bar . . . The Shuberts are plotting to bar another critic . . . It's a boy at the A. J. Koblers' . . . That was a pretty stiff editorial in the Times last Sunday, demanding that Congressman Lindbergh, of Minnesota, be impeached for his war attitude.

ANOTHER GANG MEMBER SLAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(A.P.)—The slaying of Patrick O'Donnell, 33, in a speakeasy on the West Side, brought to four the number of gangsters who have been killed since a week ago.

O'Donnell deviated from underworld practice of naming his slayer as Joey Mangels, alleged blind pig operator and hoodlum. Mangels is a reputed member of a North Side gang and police fear the shooting may result in reprisals.

The first of the week's gang executions was that of Henry Connors, minor political terrorist, was shot down in a cabaret. Three days later, Cy Cawley and Edward Westcott, alleged racketeers, were shot and killed.

Hearse Upsets, Casket Tossed Out

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 9.—Residents of Claysville were aroused when a hearse ploughed into a ditch and upset. A casket, which the driver said did not contain a corpse, was dumped out. It was loaded into an ambulance and the journey westward continued.

OFFICER CAPTURES DRIVER AFTER TRIPLE CRASH

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

THERE was a big political rally the other night that must have rivalled the rallies held in the good old days. The meeting was held in a Turner Hall, composed of a first floor and a dancing hall, overlooked by a balcony and graced by a stage.

Havey J. Boyle.

The night was oppressively hot. Women, most of them stout, were fanning themselves with their handkerchiefs. The men had their coats off. The stage was decorated with an American flag, and on the stage the leading characters in this act of the drama sat in full view awaiting their cues. They were surrounded by supernumeraries, whose only speaking parts were shouts of approval.

A speaker harangued the crowd for a half-hour, modestly referring to his own accomplishments, and sardonically casting aspersion on some unlucky fellow who happened to be his foe. He held the crowd in the palm of his hand. A smile from him meant a laughing roar from the crowd. A sneer brought sarcastic guffaws that sympathized with his sentiments.

Outside, a large crowd stood and listened for the hall could not hold all that wanted to hear their favorites. Policemen were busily moving the automobile traffic. A small boy was carrying a flickering red light.

The speakers were for the most part expert students of mob reaction. Like a maestro a deft speaker waved an imaginary baton and produced a well-regimented orchestra of thought. He was ironic, sarcastic, bitter in turns in discussing an opponent, diffident, modest and ingratiating when setting forth his own claims.

Honesty, the home, the flag all were celebrated and cherished. His inflections were the cues he passed out to the crowd to make it hiss or cheer as he desired.

The crowd was in turn delightfully loveable and insently cruel. It is a strange thing to stand where you can't see the mob and hear them yell in glee or murmur a low roll of indignation.

As one stood out in the dark and listened one got the idea of an animal tamer with a playful lion, now stroking its mane, now bringing it snarling with a crack of a whip.

The drama lacked only one essential that night. There should have been a sympathizer from the opposition ready to rise in that sea of opposition and cry out for his man and annoy the speaker. True, that part would have been a thin one, for the dramatist in charge speedily would have had him tossed out, while the mob surged about him and shook fists and roared. But a bleeding hero was missing that night. Who will volunteer?

MUEHLBRONNER FORMER STATE SENATOR, DIES

North Side Man's Active Career in Business and Politics Comes to End

Charles Arthur Muehlbronner, 72, former state senator and for many years active in business and civic affairs of Pittsburgh, died last night at his home, 104 East North avenue, North Side.

He was born in Philadelphia and came to Pittsburgh in 1878, becoming active in politics in 1881, when he was elected to city council of old Allegheny. He served six years, and was then elected a member of the State Senate, in which he served four terms. He was secretary of the Republican county executive committee three years.

Muehlbronner

More than 25 years ago Mr. Muehlbronner helped to save from drowning some 30 persons, who had been upset into the water from their boat at Mammoth Cave, Ky. The group included several Pittsburghers, who were attending, with Mr. Muehlbronner, the convention of the League of Commission Merchants at Louisville.

Mr. Muehlbronner was president of the Iron City Produce Company, the Standard Ice and Storage Company, the Pittsburgh Produce Trade Association, and vice president of the Western Savings and Deposit Bank. He was president of the board of St. Francis Hospital, an elder in the Reformed Presbyterian Church of the Ascension and was active in Masonic affairs.

He leaves his widow; two sons, Harry and Oscar Muehlbronner, and four daughters, Mrs. Etta Tipper, Mrs. Emeralda Eymon, Mrs. Cora McFarland and Mrs. Adeline Nutting.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon from the Reformed Church of the Ascension.

HOUSE CANVASS FOR TAX CUT STARTED

Sun-Telegraph Workers Begin Campaign to Win Slash for Wage Earners

Beginning today the house-to-house canvass of citizens of Pittsburgh will be undertaken in obtaining signatures to petitions to Congress asking immediate action toward the reduction of the Federal tax on earned incomes.

Fifty thousand signers are desired in order to make the protest from this district the largest per capita representation in the country.

To carry on the campaign successfully volunteer chairmen are required in every ward and district in the city and in all of the suburban communities. At the same time business organizations, professional groups and women's clubs will be enlisted in the canvass in the downtown section of the city.

More than 100 volunteer chairmen have been called for and these leaders in turn will appoint sub-chairmen and community workers. It is expected that nearly 2,000 workers will be engaged in the campaign. There are no formalities. When a chairman volunteers he receives his blank petition forms, names his sub-chairmen and goes to work. The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph supplies the petitions and suggestions for the canvass.

Persons willing to serve in the patriotic cause have been requested to send their names and addresses to the Income Tax Department, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh. Supplies will be forwarded and instructions will be given as to territory, eligibility of signers and how sub-chairmen may be allotted their work.

WILLS DISPOSE OF $50,000

Two estates, aggregating $50,000, were disposed of in wills filed for probate today, with immediate relatives of the deceased named as beneficiaries.

Mrs. Lena Lamb, 624 Ridge avenue, McKeesport, disposes of an estate of $35,000 to be placed in trust for her husband, Conrad C. Lamb. He will receive the income from the fund. At his death the estate will revert to Mrs. Lamb's six children. A number of minor bequests were made to other members of the family. Victor M. Lamb, a son, was named executor and trustee, to serve without bond.

Thomas Rotherman, Sr., Tarentum, leaves a $15,000 estate to his wife, Catherine. The residue will be given to his seven children at her death. John and Thomas Rotherman, Jr., were named executors.

SHOTS FIRED AT TIRES IN CHASE

A wild dash out Bigelow boulevard last night landed Adolph A. Fromholzer, of 107 Schley avenue, Ingram, behind the bars in Center Avenue Police Station. In the wake of his flight police say he left three damaged machines and scores of frightened motorists.

The run ended at Center avenue, where Motorcycle Patrolman A. E. Rahe, who said he had pursued him at top speed all the way, sounding his siren and firing several shots at the rear tires, finally brought the suspect to a stop.

Fromholzer was booked on a reckless driving charge. He will be given a hearing in Traffic Court tomorrow morning.

One of the victims of the dash was Carl Winters, of 4229 Dunkeld place. Police say the other two have not made known their identity.

SAW MILL ROAD WORK RUSHED

With completion of the concreting on the McKinley Park branch of the Saw Mill Run boulevard, work on that section of the new roadway is virtually brought to a close. Only a small portion in the vicinity of Bausman street will be left, and the contractors declare this will be completed within a few weeks.

In the meantime the steady construction pace is kept up on the Overbrook branch of the road. But two small stretches of concrete remain, the section between McKinley Park and the Liberty Tubes, and that between Reflectorville and the Library road. Both will be finished within the next two months, bringing the entire project to completion by late fall.

SUNDAY MOVIES DRAW CROWDS

Sunday movies were inaugurated at Arsenal Park yesterday. A large crowd saw "In Old Kentucky." There was every indication that Lawrenceville, Bloomfield and "The Strip," from which the audience was drawn, approved of Mayor Charles H. Kline's free show.

The four parks at which Kline's free Sunday movies had previously been given were also provided with entertainment. At Schenley Park "The Legion of the Condemned" was shown; at Highland Park, "Uncle Tom's Cabin"; at East Park, North Side, "Flying Luck," and at McKinley Park, South Hills, "Give and Take."

Good-sized audiences attended all the park shows. Extra forces of policemen and other city employes were on hand to insure safety.

Martin Leaves Politics Out Of Court

Judge Richard W. Martin, mayoralty candidate, addressing upward of 200 jurors in Common Pleas Court today at the opening of the September term of court, dwelt only on the duties of jurors. No mention was made of politics, now at fever heat, with charges of illegal assessments and police laxity filling the air.

After detailing the duties of the jurors the jurist told them they should refrain from discussing cases at issue outside the jury room.

Bellevue Film Shows Change Ownership

Bellevue's two movie theaters, the Bellevue and the Lincoln, which have been operated by the Bellevue Amusement Company, Elmer Thomas, manager, have been leased by the Associated Theaters, according to announcement. The Bellevue will be remodeled before reopening for the fall season, according to the new owners, Isaac, Harry and Benjamin Browarsky, of the North Side. These are the only movie theaters in the North Boroughs district.

THEATER'S SAFE CRACKED

Returning to the Arcadia Theater, 823 East Ohio street, at 2:30 a. m. today, Peter Kalaba, 25, of 830 Progress street, assistant manager, found the knob of the combination of the safe had been broken off, the safe door opened and $230 missing.

He told detectives that in company with Joseph Erdelack, 21, of 1068 Sawmill way, an employe, and William Reiser, 20, of 1222 Howard street, a former employe, he left the theater at 11 p. m., yesterday. When they returned to get out some posters for today's performance they noticed a rear door opened, and found the safe had been pilfered and papers scattered about the room. The money, in a strong box in the safe, was missing.

Detectives said they did not believe the safe could have been opened by knocking off the knob of the combination, and that the door of the theater gave no indication of being forced from the outside.

Sam Gould, manager, told detectives that Kalaba and his companions did not know the combination of the safe.

The safe was robbed about a year ago, when a small amount of money was taken.

Officials of the Haus Bowling Alley, 306 Federal street, reported to the detective bureau today that during the night the safe in the office had been opened by manipulating the combination.

They were unable to state if anything had been taken, although it was said $500 and jewelry was in the safe when locked.

KLINE TO GREET SILVER FLEET

Street parades and public inspection will be among the activities of the Goodrich Silver Fleet during its two-day visit here on its 32,000-mile tour of the country.

The 15-car caravan, under command of Lieut. H. R. Schaeffer, will arrive at the Point Bridge from Canton, O., at 5 p. m., Wednesday, where it will be informally welcomed by Mayor Charles H. Kline. It will remain in the city until 7:30 a. m. Friday when the departure will be made for Westfield, N. Y.

The local program, arranged by J. A. Hoban, local branch manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, scheduled the fleet to parade from the Point to Hotel Schenley. After a short exhibit, the cars will be turned over to local representatives for display in their showrooms.

The cars will be seen in front of the City-County Building for one hour from 10:30 a. m. Thursday morning, after having paid calls in East Liberty. The start will be made at 8 a. m. from Hotel Schenley. During the downtown stop, Mayor Kline is to officially welcome the fleet and sign the goodwill scroll bearing the scores of executives. The fleet personnel will be guests of the Advertising Club of Pittsburgh at a dinner in the William Penn Hotel at 6:30 p. m. Lieut. Schaeffer and P. J. Kelley, Goodrich company advertising manager, will speak.

DePaul Institute Resumes Classes

DePaul Institute, Castlegate avenue, Brookline, resumed classes today after the summer vacation. School opened with mass at 9 o'clock. It gives vocational training in 16 branches and during the 20 years of its existence has developed free of charge, hearing and speech to more than 1,100 children

Home and Hospital Club Plans Meeting

The Home and Hospital Club, of Bellevue, is scheduled to hold its first session of the new club year at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the home of Mrs. E. F. Waldschmidt, 106 North Euclid avenue, Bellevue. Associate hostesses will be Mrs. D. W. Zeber, Mrs John Hughes and Mrs. A. J. Snodgrass.

Roomer Injured In 3-Story Fall

Walter Boden, 40, a roomer at 712 Cedar avenue, North Side, was in a serious condition in Allegheny General Hospital today as a result of falling from a third-floor window late last night. Mrs. B. Sallenberg, owner of the place, heard groans below her window, and saw Boden lying on the pavement. She called the hospital ambulance.

Haysville Petitions County for Fence

Haysville Council at its regular meeting decided to petition the county to erect a cable fence along the roadway paralleling the Pennsylvania Railroad. The roadway recently has been raised several inches, which, it is declared, has created a dangerous situation for autos and vehicles, especially in wet weather when danger of skidding onto the railway tracks is increased.

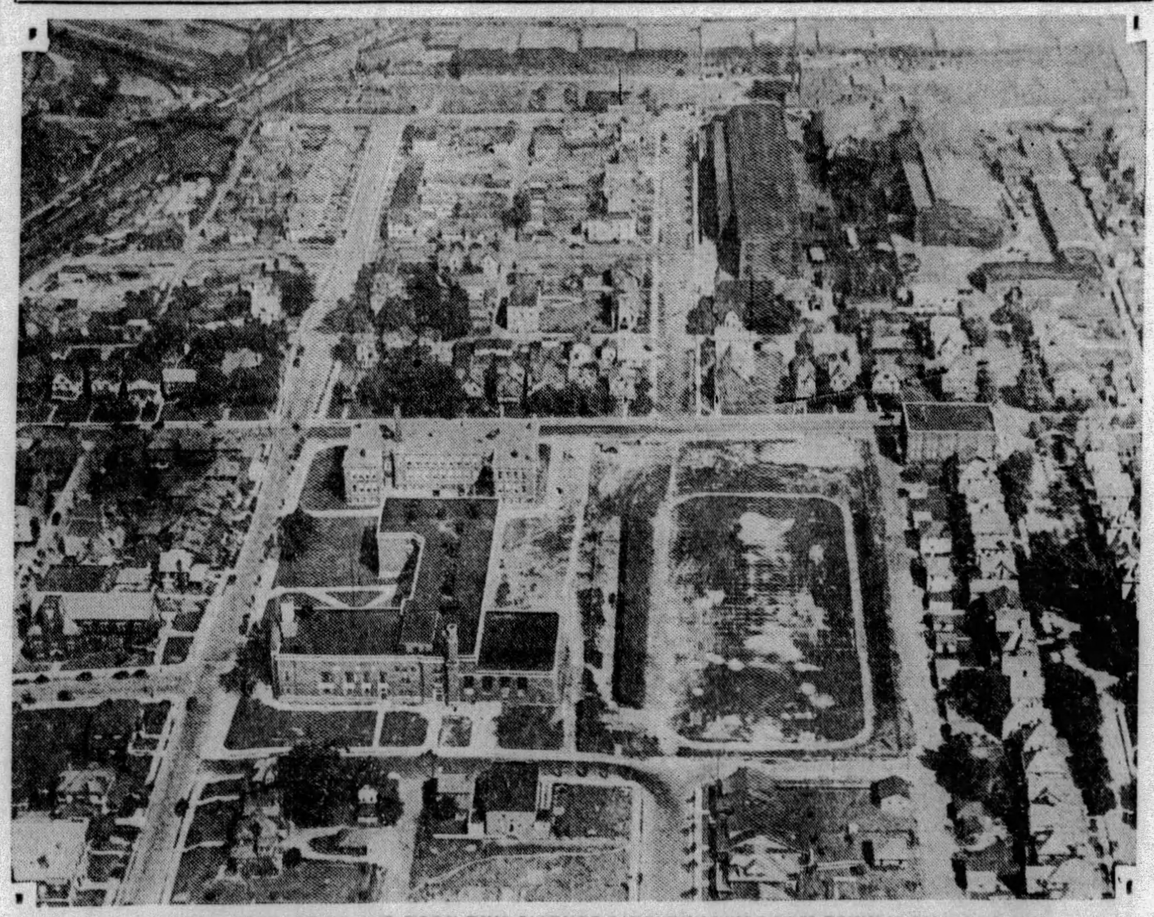
IF YOU FLEW, WHAT TOWN WOULD YOU THINK THIS?



AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHER WHO TOOK THIS PICTURE SAYS THIS UNMARKED TOWN IS ELLWOOD CITY

If you were flying in the western Pennsylvania district and you came upon this town, would you know where you were? No sign naming the town or indicating a place for safe landing was found though several large roofs suitable for marking are shown.

Allegheny Flier Lost, Air-Marking Boosted

By MAX HENRICI.

Since the Sun-Telegraph told of a flier becoming lost in the Allegheny Valley three weeks ago, a number of towns in that section have arranged to put up signs giving their names and indicating the location and distance to the nearest airport.

The aviator in question, forced by darkness to alight and not knowing where he could land in safety, came down in a dangerous place and had a narrow escape. He said if he had found signs on roofs telling him where he was he would not have had to take the risk.

Tarentum, New Kensington and Brackenridge since have arranged to mark their towns for the guidance of aviators, and now Springdale falls into line. Christ Baldus, a merchant there, writes, as follows:

"This is to inform you that your campaign to have all towns in the Pittsburgh district 'air-marked' has borne fruit in Springdale. We are located at 800 Pittsburgh street, Springdale, and have painted on the roof of this building, which is 112 feet long, a sign 90 feet in length and about 10 feet high, indicating the name of our town."

Mr. Baldus asks for advice as to the marker pointing to the landing field. His letter has been referred to the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, Oliver building, Pittsburgh, which will supply the government specifications as to "air-marks" to all who inquire for them.

The Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, New York, is awarding to those who put up signs conforming to the government specifications, certificates of distinguished service to aviation, signed by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. Two Pittsburgh concerns already have won certificates—Thompson & Co., for a sign on their Oakmont plant, and the Pittsburgh Reflector Company for an illuminated sign on their Irwin plant.

How many more certificates are coming to the Pittsburgh district? Every town should have one or more. MARK YOUR TOWN!

Will Rogers Says

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 9.

The plane accident was terribly unfortunate and it no doubt will have a tendency with some of the more skeptical ones to say that aviation is unsafe.

Their deaths will receive tremendous publicity all over the country, but today, when you read this, if you had the entire statistics of everybody all over the country who was killed Sunday by autos, well it will be lucky if its under twenty-five. Yet some of their deaths will never be published beyond their own country newspapers. Yet every one of them is just as dead as those on the plane.

So, Sir, travel by air is here to stay, and all the doubt in the world can't stop it, and accidents by plane will soon be taken the same as we take the news that a train at a grade crossing has killed a truckload of people, just a matter of fact.

Yours, WILL.

MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

24 INJURED AS TRAFFIC TAKES HEAVY TOLL

Woman and Children Lose Lives as Car Crashes Into Tree; 7 Run Down

A woman and her two children were killed and 24 persons were injured in automobile and street accidents yesterday and last night. A fourth victim, struck by an automobile Thursday, died in a hospital.

Mrs. Mary Bersani, 25, of 400 Milroy street, North Side, and her two children, Margaret, 3, and her three-months-old son, Emilio, were killed last night when an automobile in which they were riding ran off the Ingomost road, near the South Hills Country Club, and crashed into a tree.

LOSES CONTROL OF CAR

According to Overbrook police, the automobile was driven by Vincent Fischetti, 28, of 441 Third avenue. He suffered minor bruises. Mrs. Bersani's sister, Miss Angeline Mingrino, 21, a passenger in the car, suffered a probable fracture of the skull. Her condition was regarded critical at South Side Hospital.

Fischetti told police that he lost control of the automobile.

Struck by an automobile in Glassmere Thursday, Joseph J. Helger, 50, of 814 Mill street, Tarentum, suffered injuries which caused his death yesterday in Citizens' General Hospital. Charles B. Meals, of 500 North Jefferson street, Kittanning, alleged driver, posted bond for his appearance before the coroner.

Six persons were cut and bruised when an automobile in which they were riding ran off the Freeport road near Boquet and tumbled down a 60-foot embankment to the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

The injured were Mrs. Jean Stager, 21, and her son, Norman, 4 years old; Anna Welsh, 23; Robert Tyson, 22; James Potts, 22, and an unidentified man. The victims, all of Arnold, were taken to Citizens' General Hospital. Potts was driving the car at the time, according to police.

GIRL RUN DOWN

Virginia Forsythe, 7, of 2100 Sidney street, was taken to South Side Hospital after having been struck by an automobile driven by Virginia Keifer, of 2632 Cobden street, in Arlington avenue, near Sterling street, police said.

When an automobile in which she was riding struck a pole, Mrs. Helen Wendling, 42, of 2563 Woodstock avenue, Swissvale, suffered body lacerations. She was taken to Braddock General Hospital. The accident occurred near her home.

Suffering a probable fracture of the skull when struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Mrs. Anna Moyer, of 514 Belmot place, William Jackson, 59, of 1918 Monroe street, Swissvale, was taken to Braddock General Hospital. Mrs. Moyer was not arrested.

Andrew Molitoris, 32, and Thomas Grace, 47, both of West Hays place, were cut and bruised when an automobile in which they were riding struck a pole in Eighth avenue, Munhall, police reported. They were treated at Homestead Hospital.

Hit by an automobile in State street, Clairton, Alfred Lang, 23, of 915 Miller avenue, Clairton, suffered a fracture of the right leg.

Taken to the Allegheny Valley Hospital after having been struck by an automobile near his home, Eugene Bradley, 8, of Mt. Vernon, was said to be suffering from a compound fracture of the skull.

BOY FALLS OUT OF CAR

With lacerations of the arms and body, Joseph Barbin, 20, of Creighton, was taken to the Allegheny Valley Hospital after being struck by an automobile near his home.

Mrs. James Raisbeck, 24, of 459 West Seventh street, Homestead, suffered lacerations and bruises when an automobile in which she was riding collided with a milk truck at Seventh avenue and Hays street, Homestead.

Two-year-old George Falen, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Falen, of Cleveland, suffered a possible fracture of the skull when he fell out of an automobile in which he was riding with his parents near the Homestead Hospital, to which he was taken.

Severe bruises were suffered by John Hackey, 12, of 1330 Ravine street, Munhall, when he was struck by an automobile near his home. He was taken to Homestead Hospital.

WOMAN HIT BY CAR

Mrs. Warzela Czarniecki, 50, of 2107 Wharton street, was injured seriously when struck by a street car at South Twenty-seventh and Carson streets. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. Police said she stepped into the path of the trolley.

David E. Levine, 30, of 225 North Dithridge street, suffered bruises of the right arm, and Walter Scully, of 1203 Western avenue, North Side, sustained head injuries last night, when their automobiles were in collision in the Boulevard of the Allies at Seneca street. No arrests were made.

STONE LAID FOR NEW CHURCH

Hundreds of persons witnessed the laying of the corner stone of the new Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, Boggs avenue and Smith way, Mount Washington, yesterday afternoon. The stone was set in place by the Rev. David F. Schultz, pastor, the ceremony being preceded by services at which Walter E. Schuette, of Sewickley, was the speaker.

The property was purchased for about $15,000. The edifice, when completed, will cost approximately $80,000. The structure will be of Indiana limestone and gray brick.

REDS' ORATORS FINED IN COURT

Two soap-box orators for the Communist Youths' League, one a woman, were fined $25 each, with the option of 30 days in jail, at a hearing before Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court today. They were Sam Herman, 22, an organizer for the League, of 805 James street, and Pauline Truhar, 21, a stenographer for the National Miners' Union, of 2503 Arlington avenue.

They were charged with violating a city ordinance in attempting to make speeches without obtaining a permit, according to Lieut. James I. Callahan, of the Allegheny Police Station. Callahan said Miss Truhart attempted to resume the speech that Herman was prevented from making when placed under arrest. The alleged violations occurred on September 6 at Union avenue and East Ohio street.

Attorney Henry Ellenbogen, who represented both the defendants, declared it was not necessary for them to have permits. He said he would ask for a transcript of the case and would take an appeal.

MAN IDENTIFIED IN HOLDUP ARRAIGNED

North Side Woman Asserts He Demanded Money at Point of Gun; Claims Alibi

Identified as the man who early yesterday attempted to hold up Mrs. Stella Pothos, of 401 East General Robinson street, Steve Wojdyla, 29, of 289 Fortieth street, was held for court by Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court yesterday.

Wojdyla was alleged to have drawn a revolver and demanded her money after grasping Mrs. Pothos by the arm in front of her home.

In denying the charge he told the magistrate that he was at home at the time, and that his automobile, which police said was used in the attempt, had been stolen. The license number of the car was obtained by neighbors and his arrest followed.

ALLOY HARDER THAN STEEL

A metal alloy that is harder than steel has been discovered, according to an announcement today by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The metal, called "konel," was compounded by Dr. Erwin F. Lowry, of the company's research department.

While it is red hot, a test hammer "bounces off" the new metal, although it would crush steel at the same temperature, the announcement said.

It is a combination of cobalt, nickel and ferrotitanium and is being used as a substitute for platinum in radio tubes. Extensive tests are being made, the company said.

One Held, 4 Sought On Charges by Girl

County detectives today arrested one youth and sought four others on charges made by Miss Mary Diffley, 20, of 274 Dunseith street. William Driebhold, 25, of 4796 Yew street, was held on an information before Alderman George J. Anderson.

Miss Diffley told detectives she asked the youths to take her home last night from the Pagan Inn, a roadhouse, near Hulton. Identity of his companions was not disclosed by Driebhold, detectives said.

LIBERTY AVENUE MAIN FLOODS WIDE AREA

Cellars of Business Houses And Homes Under Water; All Traffic Re-Routed

E. E. Lanpher, managing engineer of the City Water Bureau, said today that the 36-inch main at Liberty avenue and Thirty-second street, which broke last night, would be repaired tomorrow. No serious damage was reported, he declared.

Lanpher said most of the pressure had been shut off at 5 a. m. today and that there was no shortage of water or any danger of a shortage.

The released water flooded Liberty avenue. All traffic was stopped and street cars on four routes were forced to detour to Penn avenue.

Officials of the Pittsburgh Railways Company declared that tracks, recently laid after new paving was placed, had been forced out of alignment and it would be days before regular traffic could be resumed.

Work in the Ward Baking Company plant at Thirtieth street and Liberty avenue was stopped for a time until a new supply of water was forced through auxiliary pipes.

Damage to machinery stored in the lower floor of the H. P. Gazzam Machine Company, at Penn avenue and Thirtieth street, was reported to police. Many stores and shops in the district reported water had done considerable damage.

Man Faces Sentence On Contempt Charge

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, in Federal court, tomorrow will sentence Daniel A. Marra, owner of the National Torch Tip and Machine Company, Washington boulevard, adjudged guilty of contempt several weeks ago. In a suit brought by the Bastian-Blessing Company, of Chicago, it was charged that Marra's company infringed on a patent owned by the Chicago concern. The court granted an injunction restraining Marra from further infringement, but he continued his operations, it was charged.

HOMEWOOD GIRL BATTLES MASKED NEGRO INTRUDER

POLICE SEEKING MAN ROUTED IN SCUFFLE

Two Armed Bandits Fail In Holdup of Doctor; Chain Store Till Robbed

Search was being made by police today for a Negro who early yesterday slugged Miss Louisa Dumbaugh, 24, of 409 Lloyd avenue, Homewood, in the home of W. J. Schofield, Jr., at 222 Hastings street, while she was caring for the Schofield children.

TWO ATTACK DOCTOR

Two masked and armed bandits who early yesterday made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up Dr. S. A. Wright, of 6936 McPherson boulevard, while he was putting his automobile in the garage in the rear of his home, also were being sought. The thugs became frightened before they could rob their victim.

The theft of a purse containing $8.45 and theater tickets from the home of Ethel Selekman, of 2715 Tilbury street, was reported to police.

Jimmying a rear window of a chain grocery store at 5714 Ellsworth avenue, thieves obtained $50. The robbery was discovered yesterday.

PROBE ALLEGED BABY FARM

Operations of an alleged "baby farm" in Braddock were being investigated by county detectives today following the death of Mrs. Anna Macura, 38, of 1141 Talbot avenue, Braddock, mother of nine children, from an allegedly illegal operation.

Mrs. Ira Bitter, 44, alleged head of the "Pennsylvania Health Home," 220 Fifth street, Braddock, was arrested on charges preferred by detectives before Alderman George J. Anderson in connection with the death of Mrs. Macura early yesterday in the Braddock General Hospital.

2 HELD AS WITNESSES

She is also held on charges of performing an illegal operation on a North Braddock girl, 18, who is in the same hospital, according to detectives.

A 14-year-old girl domestic at the Bitter place is being detained as a witness, the detectives said.

The girl, detectives said they learned, had given birth to a child at the Bitter "health home," and was working to pay the charges. Mrs. Bitter was instrumental in having the baby adopted, detectives asserted.

SON HELD ALSO

Mrs. Bitter's son, Albert, 22, also was held as a witness.

Detectives and Deputy Coroner Frank Stitzer reported that a second "health home" was operated by Mrs. Bitter at 137 Yost boulevard, Forest Hills.

A search of the two places was being made late today by Detectives John Burke and Albert S. Shedlock.

Deputy Coroner Frank Stitzer reported his investigation disclosed that an 18-year-old girl is recuperating in the Braddock General Hospital from effects of an illegal operation alleged to have been performed at a second "health home" operated by Mrs. Bitter at 137 Yost boulevard, Forest Hills.

KLINE REGIME FLAYED BY PASTOR

Dr. Duncan, in Sermon, Says Citizens Were Surprised That Mayor Runs Again

The administration of Mayor Charles H. Kline was criticized severely last night in a sermon delivered in Emory Methodist Episcopal Church by the Rev. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor.

Speaking on "An Indictment of the Kline Administration," Dr. Duncan said:

"It has been a surprise to many reputable citizens that Mayor Kline would run for mayor. His administration has been so largely looked upon as a failure that it was thought he was through with the city administration.

COMMENDED MAYOR

"He began with extensive promises of moral betterment. I remember that just after his election when we both chanced to be speakers at a fraternal banquet he evinced great moral indignation at what he conceived to be the alliance of the police with law-breakers. So strong was his aversion to this and so positive his evident purpose to do something worth while that I wrote him an open letter commending his stand and assuring him of support in the moral rectifications which he proposed.

"My expectation of moral betterment was shared by large numbers of citizens, but we have been woefully disappointed. When thousands of citizens banded together and at their own expense ascertained concrete facts on which to base complaints, the Mayor replied with a general whitewash of the city and a practical refusal to do anything. The least that such citizens had a right to expect was interest and co-operation. Instead all that came to them was criticism and opposition.

"The newspapers called attention to the ruinous influence of the multiplied slot machines in the city, but Mayor Kline's early indignation seemed to have cooled and the newspapers and not the administration stimulated public sentiment and thus promoted prosecutions.

"I have been to the mayor personally and talked with him, not as a committee, but as an individual. I have tried to be fair with him realizing that public officials are often criticised at long range where they cannot make adequate reply; but never has he shown any disposition, that I have discovered, to co-operate for the correction of the evils pointed out.

CITY RUM SALES

"The liquor situation is a stain on the Kline administration. With the whole police force at its command, liquor saloons have still flourished openly. The claim that prohibition could not be enforced in Pittsburgh is disproved by the fact that Commander Pennington, with only a few men, closed 435 saloons in 15 months.

"I have no personal grudge against Mayor Kline. I have asked no political favors, and of course have received none. What I have asked in common with thousands of other citizens of all creeds has been a manifest disposition to take the police force out of politics, to break with the lawless element of the city, and to show some practical interest in correcting lawlessness and vice.

"There are fine men connected with the administration, but they are evidently not in control. The mayor must lead. The rough and lawless elements have had their day. The people as a whole should have their chance.

ROAD OPENING FETE SET

At a conference held by Hill Top business men and civic bodies with the South Side Advancement Association, Tuesday, September 24 was set as the date for the celebration which will commemorate the reopening of South Eighteenth street, recently completed by the city. The celebration will consist of an auto parade which will visit every section of the South Side and Hill Top.

According to present plans the parade will start the South Side travel up the new roadway to Brownsville road, and pass over that thoroughfare to Brentwood. Returning it is planned to turn down the Becks Run road reaching the South Side by a different route.

Stolen Car Crashes, Injured Youth Held

Police today placed a suspicious person charge against a youth believed to be John J. Johovitz, 17, of 1120 Merriman street, injured when an automobile he was driving crashed into a pole on Second avenue near the Tenth Street Bridge at 3 a. m. At Allegheny General Hospital he gave the name of Pisowczy.

The car was said by police to be owned by L. Gordon, of 307 Coltart square, reported stolen shortly after midnight.

DIVINE TURNS BARRISTER

What should a clergyman, who is also a lawyer, do if a person he has married applies to him for legal help in getting a divorce?

The Rev Percy K. Jones, pastor of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, New Kensington, who has just passed the state bar examinations, says he will face that question "in the way of the world" when it comes, as he expects it to do.

"You can't tie two cats together, and sometimes we humans are just that, and expect the love of God to keep our claws sheathed," the Rev. Mr. Jones said.

"The question of divorce is one that has got to be faced. The church will have to do something about it very soon."

The New Kensington pastor expects to make the law an adjunct of religion. He expects to find it helpful in social work. He probably will practice in Allegheny county

He is a Welshman and a graduate of Kings College, Oxford.

3 Leap to Safety As Train Crushes Stalled Auto

Two men and a woman ran to safety today as a Pennsylvania Railroad train struck their stalled auto on the Springdale crossing and demolished it.

Mrs. Catherine Beegle, of Blawnox, was driving her husband, U. S. Beegle, and Capt. Sylvester Smith, of Blawnox, to their work on the steamboat E. K. Davidson when the car stalled on the tracks.

Capt. Smith ran up the track to watch for approaching trains and saw one speeding towards him. He ran back, shouting. The Beegles jumped out and ran from the car as the train hurled it aside.

PROPOSE BONDS FOR POOL

Avalon residents will vote on a $40,000 bond issue for a borough swimming pool at the general election, November 5.

The borough council has approved an ordinance to submit the bond proposal, following many requests. Children of the community boosted a fund that was started to help build the pool by holding plays and sales of candy and baked goods.

Agitation for a pool resulted from the Ohio River being held unfit for bathing.

Why Are Blue Mondays?

OH, DEAR! Tomorrow is washday again. How often do we hear that remark? How many homes in this great metropolitan city dread to see washday come! AND WHY? All because that old machine that has given such faithful service is now worn out. For the past two or three months it has given you no end of trouble and worry. Right in the midst of your washing the thing stops . . . and then what?

The Quick Coffield With the Gold Seal Wringer

No Need For Worry Now!

During the month of September we are going to give you a trade-in allowance on your old machine (regardless of age, make or condition) that will astound you. A worth-while opportunity for you to realize a large allowance for that old machine that has been the cause of so many blue washdays. Then, too, you will experience the thrill and satisfaction that comes from using the new improved gyrator method of washing. The QUICK COFFIELD, with the GOLD SEAL WRINGER, will wash your clothes in one-third the time. SPEED, QUALITY AND PLEASING PERFORMANCE.

It's in the Air

Hundreds of Pittsburgh homes will take advantage of this opportunity. Will you be one of them? Don't wait until the last minute, but make up your mind now to discard the worries of blue Mondays and come smiling through with a brand new COFFIELD.

ONLY FOUR SEPTEMBER LEADERS FAIL

SETTLED in every respect except a mathematical one, which isn't worth the slightest consideration, though the schedules will not be completed until three weeks from next Sunday, the major league pennant races of 1929 have borne out the ancient baseball wheeze that the teams leading in their respective loops on September 1 may be safely expected to finish on top. The teams of Joe McCarthy and Connie Mack are as good as in.

Joe McCarthy.

In the history of the present two big circuits, that dope has failed only four times to hold good. And all four of those failures were chronicled in the National League. Not once has the tradition been upset in the American. In several years the club leading in the junior girdle on September 1 was ousted from the honor position at a later date, but in every case the team thus hurled back fought its way to the peak again before the end of the campaign.

As the National has seen 54 summers and the American 30, this means that as a pennant barometer September 1 has gone wrong only four times in a total of 84 flag races.

THE New York Giants of 1908 were the first National League club to go contrary to the championship custom. They were in first place and running ahead of Pittsburgh and Chicago on September 1, but the Bucs lost the pennant in the final game of the regular schedule in the Windy City and the Cubs won out by defeating the McGrawites in the post-season play-off of the famous Merkle game.

The Giants also contributed one of the other exceptions to the rule in 1914. That was the year of the Braves' sensational dash to the pennant after being in last place as late as July 19. When September arrived, the New Yorkers were still in first place by a narrow margin, but the Braves soon passed them and retained the leadership to the end of the pennant course.

WHEN the fateful date rolled around in 1920 the Cincinnati Reds were showing their heels to the pack, but it was another year in which tradition was to be overturned. Brooklyn took the lead shortly afterward and eventually captured the pennant.

The fourth instance in which there was a departure from the long-standing baseball fashions gives Pittsburgh fans a headache every time they recall it. The Pirates had a lead of seven and a half games late in August and were still in front on September 1, but they blew their big chance and lost the muslin to the Giants.

Connie Mack.

SOME turfmen are going so far as to pronounce Boojum, the sensational Whitney colt that won the Hopeful Stakes at Saratoga in record time, greater than Man o'War. That's a stiff claim, but Boojum's admirers predict that he will prove it. They point out that his new record in the Hopeful shows him to be as fast as Man o' War was. He is entered in all of the big juvenile stakes of the year, and is certain to set a new mark for 2-year-old earnings if not the greatest total for winnings ever amassed by any horse in one season.

THERE are some other horsemen who express the belief that Whichone, the stablemate that ran second to Boojum in the Hopeful is the better of the two. One of these is Linus McAtee, famous Whitney jockey. He had his choice of the two mounts in the Hopeful and selected Whichone. He had ridden both and believed he was picking the better.

And he is not yet convinced that he wasn't right in his conclusions, for though Boojum won it was only by a head, and the fact must not be overlooked that Boojum was carrying only 117 pounds to Whichone's 125. Does a difference of eight pounds equal a head in distance? Many race followers believe it means even more than that. Another test will come next Saturday in the Futurity.

IT IS the opinion of Andy High and other members of the Cardinal club, if the National League had not abolished the "most valuable player" award, it would, in justice, have to be given to Outfielder Taylor Douthit, of the Redbirds.

"The best ball player in the league, according to our men, is Douthit," said High. "He never was better. The country would have heard a great deal more about him this season if the Cards had been in the lead.

Taylor Douthit.

"I HAVE seen Cobb, Speaker, and all of the other great outfielders of recent years in action," continued the St. Louis third sacker, "but give me Douthit over any of them. What a batter he has turned out to be! The boys on our bench get a big kick out of it every time Douthit goes to the plate. They like to see him get on the bases. To my way of thinking, Douthit is without a rival for the distinction of being ranked as the most valuable player of the year in the National League."

PIP KOEHLER, who starred in basketball for the Morrys here in 1926 and 1927, and for whom Johnny Freund later found a berth in the American League of professional floor teams, wants to come back to this section as a coach when the next basket season arrives. At present he is captain of the Toledo baseball club in the American Association, managed by Casey Stengel.

Last winter Koehler played basketball for the Toledo Red Men, one of the best independent teams in the country. He received offers from American League fives, but preferred the independent connection. Now he would like to come back to the region in which he was originally successful and outstanding, and is ready to consider a coaching proposition from any of the colleges or schools in these parts.

RECENTLY the St. Louis Nationals played four exhibition games in four straight days at Waynesboro, Lewistown, Rochester, N. Y., and Scottdale. Secretary Clarence Lloyd was being twitted about the series as a catch-penny tour not worth the candle.

"Is that so?" Lloyd retorted. "Well, here's something to put down in your notebook—the Cardinals received more money for those four exhibition games than they received during their entire

BLUE RIDGE SERIES OPENS

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Hagerstown, winner of the first half of the season and Martinsburg, winner of the second half, will open the 1929 Blue Ridge League championship contest at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the local park. The Blue Ridge league is the oldest Class D League in organized baseball. The team winning four games will take the title and play the winner of the Middle Atlantic League for the championship of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

SHARKEY'S EYE HURT

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—An injury to his left eye, which is rapidly responding to treatment, has forced Jack Sharkey to curtail his practice drills for his encounter with Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia idol, at the Yankee Stadium on September 26.

ROBERTS NINE WINS

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 9.—Roberts of Sharon, won the Mercer County baseball championship, yesterday by defeating Pardoe, 12-15, in the final game of an elimination series.

MISS HUNTER DEFENDS CROWN

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Miss Anjeanette Hunter, of the Stanton Heights Golf Club, started play in defense of her women's Western Pennsylvania golf championship at the Oakmont Country Club this morning, battling against one of the largest and strongest fields ever to participate in the event.

While the women were fighting for the high honor of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania over the Hulton layout, compatriots of the Sons of the American Revolution were staging their annual state championship at the Pittsburgh Field Club, and members of the Women's Schenley Park Golf Club were qualifying for their club championship over the municipal links.

BIG FIELD AT OAKMONT

The big field at Oakmont found the going hard in today's qualifying round. Scores were running rather high generally, although it appeared early in the day several exceptionally good scores might develop.

Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, of the Allegheny Country Club, and Mrs. J. Raymond Price, of Oakmont, the only two women other than Miss Hunter to have won the West Penn crown in the past, are the outstanding favorites to menace the titlist's chances for repeating, although the field includes others who may come through, among them Mrs. L. G. Riley and Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, Mrs. D. A. Garber, of Stanton Heights; Betty Abernethy, of Oakmont; Mrs. Louis K. Friedman, of Westmoreland, and Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Match play will begin tomorrow and will continue until the final is reached Saturday.

S. A. R. IN ACTION

Col. Franklin Blackstone, chairman of the national as well as the state golf committee, is in charge of the S. A. R. tournament at the Field Club today. Play there started shortly after noon, and will be 18 holes medal play, handicapped. A driving contest and a putting event, along with golf and bridge for the women, are also on the program. A dinner dance will follow this evening.

9:12—Mrs. Sborigi, Mrs. Jackson.
9:18—Mrs. Munson Marshall, Mrs. King.

TOMORROW—THE TIDE AS A MAIL CARRIER.

MAXIE TO GET CRACK AT TITLE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

It may or may not be news to the average fight fan that Maxie Rosenbloom, of New York, may be the next light-heavyweight champion of the world, now that Tommy Loughran has discarded that title to enter the heavyweight scramble.

The New York Madison Square Garden is at work arranging a tournament in which all of the leading contenders for the 175-pound crown will compete, and Maxie is in the list, along with Tuffy Griffith, Leo Lomski, George Courtney, Mickey Walker and flock of lesser lights. And don't think for a moment that he doesn't stand an excellent chance of slapping most of those contenders for the proverbial "gool."

M. Rosenbloom

Slapping 'em around is one of the best things Maxie does, as any Pittsburgh fan will tell you. Maxie has appeared here a number of times and always has delivered punches in carload lots. He provides action along the lines of the late Harry Greb. Not a hard puncher, he nevertheless does things to his opponents; he hits 'em so often that it must seem hard to them.

BOXES BROWN TONIGHT

Maxie is in our midst again today. He fights the windup in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tonight, against one K. O. Brown, latest Negro "find" of Leo P. Flynn, of New York. Brown's chief claim to fame is that he has knocked out Osk Till in a recent bout. He'll have to knock out Maxie, too, to escape the cuffing of his young life. Maxie is particularly tough on Negro opponents, anyway. He has beaten Homer Robertson, Garfield Johnson twice and Cuban Bobby Brown, all ebony-hued foes, in other starts here, and he ought to breeze in with another victory tonight unless this new K. O. Brown is the hitter he is reported to be and can reach as shifty an opponent as Maxie happens to be.

Frank Florian, of Cleveland, and Young Jack Dempsey, also from Ohio, meet in the eight-round semi-final; Bob Moody, former Freeport Negro heavyweight, now of Cleveland, boxes George Pancka, of Homestead, in the second bout and

Bowen Strains Muscle in Germany

BOCHUM, Germany, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan Negro sprinter, was beaten twice yesterday by the German runners, Landers and Eldracher. Lammers beat the Negro by inches in the 100 meters run in 10 4-10 seconds and Eldracher barely nosed him out in the 200 meters in 21 8-10 seconds.

Reginald Bowen, of the University of Pittsburgh, suffered a strained muscle shortly after the start of the 400 meters run and was forced to withdraw.

50,000 WATCH MEYERS WIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Fifty thousand persons saw H. F. (Hub) Meyers, of Petoskey, Mich., representing the Charlevoix Boat Club, win the $10,000 Eugene F. MacDonald trophy in the central division championships of the National Outboard Motor Association, off Navy Pier, in Lake Michigan, yesterday afternoon.

An element of raving luck aided the victor and threw him into the lead when Earl Boyer, of Toledo, dived into the lake on the final lap of the second 2½-mile heat. Boyer failed to finish, but was rescued unhurt.

Frank Royer, of Chicago, finished second, and Ben Coler, of Gary, Ind., was third, the latter two places being decided only by a fraction of a second in elapsed time.

Three other events on the program were won by Daniel Engstrom, of Gary, Ind., representing the Cedar Lake Boat Club, driving his Rum Runner in the Class B race at better than 31 miles an hour over the five-mile course. There were nine starters, five of whom finished. Engstrom scored a double by taking the Class D race at the same distance with the same boat, with the elapsed driving time for two 2½-mile heats averaging 24.1 miles per hour.

The third race went to J. E. Leslie of Manistee, Mich., representing the Charlevoix Boat Club, scoring his Class C victory in the boat U. S. A., at 35.02 miles per hour, and scoring 761 points over a field of six starters.

LOEFFLERS TO PLAY

Three Loeffler cousins will play three Loeffler brothers in a special golf match at the Valley Heights Country Club Saturday when Emil, Walter and Bob battle Archie, Fred and Ben.

MAJOR LEAGUE RACES NEAR FINISH

Four weeks from today the National League race will have been run and the focus of baseball attention doubtless will be directed at Wrigley Field, Chicago, where the World Series, featuring the Cubs and Athletics, in all probability will start.

Jewel Ens and his hustlers are slated to finish up their play four weeks from yesterday in Chicago. Not so many weeks ago it was hinted about that perhaps that last game of the season might be necessary to decide the flag, but words like those were spoken before the Freebooters hit the greased skids.

HANK CAREFREE

Every profession has its unsung members who do their work well and seldom join in with those who sing the blues. There are quite a few Hank DeBerrys in baseball. Hank is a quaint Tennessean with a carefree spirit and a sense of appreciation.

DeBerry came out from underneath the stands on his way to the Brooklyn dugout.

"There goes the other half of that great $26,000 battery!" shouted Pie Traynor at Hank—"Vance gets twenty-five and Hank gets one!" Hank laughed at Pie's merry quip and then philosophized:

"It's a grand old game and you don't hear ol' Hank squawking about anything connected with baseball. We're all out here only a few hours each day, we stay at good hotels, eat good meals, enjoy the best of health and if we are not foolish we can lay a few dollars away for the umbrella season. Before I got into baseball, I was in the fields working when the sun came up and I was still there when it went down. No, sir-ee, boys, you won't see Hank decorating the mourners' bench in baseball."

DAZ MAY EARN SALARY

Perhaps Ol' Dazmarine will earn that big salary before the curtain falls. The fair-haired boy who made the Robins kick in with the princely sum was unfortunate in his health shortly after he had signed on the dotted line. Dazzy still owns the fastest ball in the National League, according to some men of the game, but there are others who think that Altoona Pat Malone has made it a good draw. The big boy from the main-line town probably will have plenty of speed to show Connie Mack's toilers.

The American Leaguers, it would seem, will be called upon to look at a lot of speed and fast-breaking hooks in the impending battles. Bush, Blake and Root are not far behind Altoona Pat in the matter of zip.

U. S. RIFLE TEAM WINS

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Aided by a 19-year-old Chicago girl and a 14-year-old Chicago boy, the United States small bore rifle team won the Lord Dewar trophy and the International Small Bore Rifle championship yesterday with a score of 7,877 out of a possible 8,000. The Great Britain team, firing on its home range, scored 7,771.

Miss Mary Ward, 19, Chicago, the only girl to ever gain a place on the United States team in the international match was the fifth highest scorer on the 20-member team. She scored 395 out of a possible 400, including the only perfect score shot by the United States team, with a 200 on the 50-yard range.

The marksmanship of the 14-year-old Chicago boy, Bradford Wiles, furnished another sensation. Wiles finished ninth among the 20 representatives of the United States, with a score of 394. Wiles is the youngest person to ever stand on the firing line in the international match.

G. M. Upshaw, Pasadena, Calif., was high man on the United States team with a score of 398.

Other members of the team finished as follow: Eric Johnson, New Haven, Conn., 396; E. O. Swanson, Minneapolis, 393; L. A. Wilkins, Norwood, Ohio, 397; F. W. Rogers, New Haven, Conn., 391; F. Johansen, Joliet, Ills., 392; T. Randle, Ft. Wayne, Texas, 395; H. H. Jacobs, Dayton, Ohio, 394; F. W. Schlesinger New Haven, Conn., 391; V. Z. Canfield, Akron, Ohio, 393; E. J. CUBS, MACKS APPROACH LEAGUE PENNANTS

LEADERS MAY CLINCH TITLES NEXT WEEK

Associated Press.

A dark and rainy week-end on the major league front saw the coming champions in the respective circuits march somewhat closer to the armistice which will precede the world series, but not so much closer as they might have marched with better luck. This advance and Babe Ruth's assault upon Detroit pitchers for his forty-first and forty-second home runs held the attention of such customers as appeared before the turnstyles.

No fault could be found with the attendances at Chicago, where the Cubs took two from the Braves on Saturday by 13 to 6 and 9 to 2, only t see the Bostonese grab a Sunda, slugfest by 13 to 11, but larger crowds have been known at Shibe Park than the one which saw the Macks divide two with Cleveland on Saturday. The week-end was a total loss for the Reds and th Giants at Cincinnati, where three scheduled games were washed away, necessitating a double-header today and a single engagement on Tuesday which had been an open date.

CUBS, A'S ALMOST IN

The week-end campaign left the Cubs in need of eight victories and the Athletics in need of nine to clinch their respective flags. Every defeat for the Yankees or Pirates, of course, lessens by one the number of victories required by the Athletics or the Cubs. At the present clip, both should gain the mathematical certainty early in the week beginning next Sunday, and the Cubs may be able to do it sooner.

Rogers Hornsby entertained the big crowds at Wrigley Field with a home run on each afternoon, bringing his total for the season to 35—one behind Wilson and Ott and two behind Klein, the league leader.

After bowing in Pittsburgh on Saturday by 6 to 2, the Robins on the Sabbath brought the Pirates back to Ebbets Field where Dazzy Vance outpointed Ray French by 2 to 1 in a moist game attended by a handful of fans. The Phillies nipped the Cardinals by 4 to 1 on Saturday and gained an even break yesterday, the game scheduled for today being advanced as fan-bait. The Phils took the opener by 8 to 6, but bowed by 4 to 3 in the six-inning nightcap which saw Chick Hafey hit a very useful home run. The second game was charged to Harry Smythe, his second defeat.

O'DOUL HITS WELL

Frank O'Doul, the reformed pitcher, sampled St. Louis pitching for seven hits in 11 times at bat over the week-end, lifting his average five points to .393, six points more than his rival Babe Herman could boast this morning. Herman got three out of nine and lost a point.

The A'S won the first game handily on Saturday by 5 to 1 behind the fine pitching of Bob Grove, who scored his twentieth victory, but Willis Hudlin outpointed Rube Walberg by 4 to 0 in the nightcap.

Detroit shaded the Yanks by 5 to 4 in the opener on Saturday, but the big guns of the dying champions boomed out an 11 to 7 decision in the second encounter. Nine bases on balls by Vic Sorrell in four rounds and three more by Emil Yde in the next five clinched yesterday's game for Roy Sherid by 9 to 3. In addition to Ruth's forty-second, the game was marked by Lou Gehrig's thirtieth and Bill Dickey's tenth.

The Red Sox rallied in the ninth on Saturday to nose out the Browns by 4 to 3, and won the first game yesterday in much the same manner and by an identical score. The second game was called at the end of the tenth with the score 0 to 0. The Sunday law in Boston forces a halt at 6 o'clock. Another bargain is on at the Fenway today.

Washington shaded Chicago by 2 to 1 on Saturday, but the White Sox obtained revenge yesterday by 4 to 3.

NEW WOMEN'S EVENT OPENS

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—A small, but bright field of women golfers, representing the East, West and Middlewest, started play over the Flossmoor Country Club links today in the Derby, a new golf classic for 72 holes of medal play.

The East is represented by two of its ranking stars, Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, N. Y., and Helen Hicks, of Inwood, Long Island, while the West has Mrs. Gregg Lifur, of Los Angeles, fighting finalist in the recent Western women's tournament at Cleveland. Virginia Van Wie and Mrs. Lee Mida, of Chicago; Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., and Gertrude Boothby, of Rochester, Minn., are Middlewestern threats.

Proper Decisions on Knotty Problems of the Game

This is the start of the second week of a daily feature which will take the football fans and players through a series of twenty-four gridiron problems such as may come up in any of the big games this season. To follow this series will mean a better understanding of the great autumn sport and more enjoyment in attending the contests.

PLAY No. 7.

Harvard is playing Pennsylvania and there has been 15 minutes' intermission between the first and second halves. The referee, through his assistants, had notified both teams of the time remaining three minutes before the whistle. The whistle is blown and Harvard is ready to resume play. The Pennsylvania team returns to the field three minutes late.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

Pennsylvania loses any previous option it may have had relative to receiving or kicking off or goal and is penalized by the referee for failure to appear ready to play within two minutes after the whistle. Harvard is allowed to put the ball in play by scrimmage on Pennsylvania's 35-yard line if it so elects, or give the ball to Pennsylvania on the latter's 15-yard line to be put into play by scrimmage.

MAXIE TO GET TITLE SHOT

Warren Farrow, of Aliquippa, opposes Elmo the Mighty, of New Castle, in the opener.

Johnny Kusic, of Youngstown, one of the most promising clever boxers in this district, battles Jack Hernandez, of Chicago, in the 10-round main bout at the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, tonight. Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, and Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, are in the semi-final and there will be three other bouts.

DEMARCO AT TRENTON

Cuddy DeMarco, McKeesport veteran lightweight, meets Young Terry, of Trenton, N. J., in the windup of the opening show of the indoor season at Trenton tonight. Georgie Levine boxes Floyd Hybert in a 10-rounder in New York.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, is at work on his preliminary card for his double windup show ushering in the indoor season at the Palisades roller rink next Thursday night. He has California Joe Gans and Ray Newton in the main event and Pedlar Palmer and Chuck Doris in the other 10-rounder.

TECH GRIDDERS RESUME DRILL

Rain gave slight relief from the intense heat as the Carnegie Tech gridders, under the direction of coaches Bob Waddell and Wally Steffens, started the second week of their training grind today. A day of rest, yesterday, enabled Tartan stalwarts suffering minor injuries to get back "in the pink," and today's session was a lively one. A reduction in the Tech squad is to be made this week, and all of the boys showed plenty of pep as they sought to stay in the running as 'varsity condidates.

Six positions on the starting eleven still are regarded as open. Hiberger and Schmidt, tackles; Rosenzweig, end; Karcis, fullback, and Capt. John Dresher, at either center or guard, are the only men who appear to have "jobs" clinched.

recent series of four days in Boston with the Braves. And we were there for a Saturday and a Sunday round, too."

HARRISON R. (Jimmy) JOHNSTON, St. Paul investment broker, who succeeded Bobby Jones as National amateur golf king by defeating Dr. O. F. Willing, Oregon dentist, 4 and 3, in the final at Pebble Beach, Cal., Saturday, will make an excellent champion. Johnston will be remembered by local golfers for his play in the amateur championship at Oakmont in 1925, at which time he led the field for the first 18 holes and then dropped out of the picture with a poor second round. He did not qualify in 1926 at Baltusrol, either, but in 1927, at his home club, Minikahda, he was second only to Bobby Jones in the qualifying test, and put out Dick Jones and Don Carrick before the Atlanta miracle man eliminated him in the third round. Last year he was medalist at Brae Burn, his 144 being five strokes better than Don Moe, who was runnner-up. He defeated J. Suffern Tailor, Jr., and George Dunlap, Jr. and then lost to Phillips Firlay.

Dr. O. F. Willing.

THE defeat of Dr. Willing with all due credit to Jimmy Johnston's winning golf, was greatly enhanced, it appears, through the unsportsmanlike conduct of the gallery of 5,000 which trailed the finalist. Apparently Pacific Coast golf galleries are not accustomed to championship golf; they certainly need a little education with regard to the etiquette of the game.

The strain of a championship match itself is great, but imagine how much harder it must be to have a large gallery openly become antagonistic. Golf is not similar to baseball, basketball or hockey when it comes to cheering a winning team or "razzing" a loser. And it was no wonder Willing lost heart when he found himself being "cheered" when he made a poor shot, while silence reigned when he made a good one. His early advantage went for naught, and despite a gallant fight, he could not survive the over-enthusiasm of the gallery in favor of his worthy opponent. Johnston certainly deserves his championship, but it might have been more interesting had the Pacific Northwestern veteran been given a more favorable break by the spectators.

18 DUKE GRID CANDIDATES ELIMINATED

With less than two weeks until the opening game of the 1929 season with Edinboro State College, Duquesne University gridders will get down to a program of hard drills today, their ranks depleted by 18 following scrimmage Saturday, and will continue in that fashion throughout the week. Probably Friday or Saturday another cut will take its toll, Head Coach Elmer Layden believes.

LALLY INJURED

Shoulder pads, dust, helmets and many bruises were in evidence Saturday afternoon when the crowd of aspirants tangled with each other successively. They kept going in and out of the fray with all possible dispatch since Layden had an appaling number with which to work in scrimmage. Some of the lettermen did not have to don either pads or helmets, including Layden's star backfield of punters and passers, Kovalcheck at full, McCarthy, quarter, and Benedict, and Capt. Donnelli at the halves.

Pat Lally, the genial veteran center and rival of Maesh Silverstein, has a badly wrenched ankle that is likely to keep him from much active work for a while as a result of his part in the melee.

OPEN ON BLUFF

Since the first two Duke games will be played on the Bluff, signs of the reserved seat stands which have always been erected in the past to supplement the bleachers are beginning to appear and it will not be long probably until they are ready to receive the fans anxious to see what sort of an aggregation Elmer Layden and Joe Bach have turned out to represent Duquesne.

After the Pirates vacate their home lot, the Duke eleven will perform at Forbes Field for the remainder of their Pittsburgh contests, which include the most important dates, those with Haskell Indians, Geneva College, Waynesburg and Albion (Mich.) College as well as Chicago Loyola. Waynesburg will wind up the season Thanksgiving morning.

GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

What is the best way to control the ball on short shots, 10 yards or less, off the green?

Answered by

LEO DIEGEL

Canadian Open, San Diego Open, Massachusetts Open, Metropolitan P. G. A. Qualifying Medal. P. G. A. Championship, 1928; Tied for Long Beach Open, 1928; San Diego Open; Canadian Open Champion, 1929.

I have seen many inexperienced players try to loft the ball on such plays. This is all wrong except under some condition out of the ordinary. The ball should travel through the air part way and roll the rest. The player will soon learn the amount of air-flight needed to get the desired roll.

Play from the middle of the feet, with the feet fairly close together the stance slightly open and the hands in front of the club head. Toe the club in slightly and take the club head back about three feet on the swing, keep it closed and use very little wrist motion.

Clubs to be used vary according to conditions and maybe a straight-faced mashie, a mashie niblick or a niblick.

Grays to Battle Warden Nine Today

Scoring two shut-out victories at Jamestown, N. Y., yesterday the Homestead Grays will continue their extensive travels today when they proceed to West Newton for a game with the Warden Mine club champions of the Pittsburgh Coal Company League.

Warden Mine is represented by a strong club and the management figures on giving the Grays a setback. The Grays will rely on Oscar Owens for hurling duty. Tomorrow the Grays are scheduled at Canonsburg and George Britt, one of the club's versatile stars will occupy the mound.

SUTHERLAND TO PERFECT LINE PLAY

CAMP HAMILTON, Windber, Pa., Sept. 9.—Jock Sutherland will devote a good bit of attention today to perfecting the line play of the Pitt Panthers, Saturday scrimmage showed a lot of glaring weaknesses in the line play of the Pitt team. While the team looked pretty good defensively, offensively both varsity and second squads showed an appalling lack of power. The first team, with three sophomores in the lineup, took up almost all the scrimmage session before they were able to take the ball over the seconds goal. This was equally due to poor interference and a stubborn defense thrown up by the second team.

NOT SO GOOD

Once the second team did get the ball, however, they weren't much better than the varsity, for they didn't gain 20 yards. Today's and tomorrow's practice sessions will be devoted to a lot of scrimmaging and fundamental work. The blocking of the famed Pitt interference was sadly off color and Dr. Sutherland will spend much time changing this state of affairs.

The lineups for the first and second squads Saturday were as follows:

First team—Collins and Donchess, ends; Tully and McMurdo, tackles; Dimeolo and Montgomery, guards; Daugherty, center; Edwards, quarter; Uansa and Williams, halves, and Parkinson, full.

Second team—Tommins and Loehr, ends; Quatz and Corson, tackles; Hart Morris and Lewis, guards; Barnes, center; Baker, quarter, Walinchus and Murphy, halves, and Clark, fullback.

VISIT CAMP

Yesterday was a quiet day in camp. A number of the boys went to Windber for morning church service, while at the camp Dr. McMillan, of Pittsburgh addressed those who remained. Quite a few friends and relatives of the camp personnel visited Camp Hamilton in the afternoon. Among the guests were Dr. L. Markovitz, Dr. J. C. Rosenthal, Dr. C. R. Colbert and family, all of Johnstown, and Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Rahter, of Wellsville, O.

SHIELDS ADVANCES IN NATIONAL SINGLES

NEW YORK ACE PUTS OUT APPEL

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Frank Shields, of New York, conquered Kenneth Appel, of South Orange, N. J., in straight sets in the only match of the National tennis singles championship at the West Side Tennis Club yesterday.

Shields, who drew a first-round bye, won in easy fashion by scores of 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Shields' victory put him into the third round, along with Big Bill Tilden, Richard N. Williams, J. S. Oliff, of England; John Van Ryn, John Doeg, Wilbur F. Coen, Frank Hunter, Tamio Abe and others who drew first-round byes and won their second round matches Saturday.

Such players as Tilden, Hunter, Doeg, Coen, Van Ryn, Shields, Williams and Oliff were idle today, giving the rest of the field a chance to catch up.

But even without these players on the courts, some close battles involving leading stars were in prospect. Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., was matched with Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines. Berkeley Bell met his fellow Austin, Tex., resident, Bruce Barnes; two New Yorkers, Dr. George King and Edward W. Feibleman, were pitted against one another.

The two Englishmen, H. W. (Bunny) Austin and E. R. Avory also were to see action as were Julius Seligson, Herbert L. Bowman, Phil Neer and other luminaries.

LADIES' NIGHT MARKS RACES

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Cubs, has ordered a new consignment of bats for use in the impending world series. He wants his sluggers to get used to them.

How Cubs, Athletics Can Clinch Pennants

NATIONAL LEAGUE

GAMES TO PLAY

CUBS—22—With Pittsburgh, 1; with New York, 4; with St. Louis, 2; with Brooklyn, 4; with Cincinnati, 7; with Philadelphia, 3; with Boston, 1.

PIRATES—22—With Chicago, 1; with New York 4; with St. Louis, 7; with Boston, 5; with Philadelphia, 3; with Brooklyn, 2.

THIRTEEN full games ahead of the Pirates, the Cubs can clinch the pennant by winning 10 out of the 22 games. The Pirates could not pass them even if they won all of their 24 remaining games. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
CHICAGO	99	55	.643
PITTSBURGH	98	56	.636

IF the Cubs win only 9 out of their remaining 22 games the Pirates would have to win 22 out of 22 to finish in a tie. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PITTSBURGH	98	56	.636
CHICAGO	98	56	.636

AMERICAN LEAGUE

GAMES TO PLAY

ATHLETICS—21—With New York, 2; with Cleveland, 2; with St. Louis, 4; with Detroit, 3; with Washington, 3; with Chicago, 4; with Boston, 3.

YANKEES—23—With Philadelphia, 2; with Cleveland, 5; With St. Louis, 4; with Detroit, 2; with Washington, 4; with Chicago, 4; with Boston, 2.

FOURTEEN full games ahead of the Yankees, the Athletics still need only 9 victories out of 21 games to clinch the pennant. The Yankees could not pass them even if they won all of their remaining 23 games. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PHILADELPHIA	100	54	.649
NEW YORK	99	55	.643

IF the Athletics win only 8 out of the 21 games, the best the Yankees could do if they won all of their 23 remaining games would be to tie them for the lead. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PHILADEPHIA	99	55	.643
NEW YORK	99	55	.643

(EVERY GAME THE PIRATES AND YANKEES LOSE FROM NOW UNTIL THE END OF THE SEASON MEANS ONE LESS VICTORY THE CUBS AND ATHLETICS WILL NEED TO CLINCH THE PENNANTS IN THEIR RESPECTIVE LEAGUES.)

Irish Polo Stars Defeat Yanks, 18-3

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Great Britain in her efforts to recapture the Westchester Cup, emblematic of international polo supremacy, might do well to draw upon Ireland for material.

For yesterday at Port Washington, L. I., four hard-riding and hard-hitting Irishmen defeated a 30-goal all-America Meadow Brook combination, 18 to 3. The Irish outfit was composed of Cecil and Gerald Balding, and the Roark brothers, Pat and Aidan. On the American four were S. Sanford, J. W. Webb, J. C. Cowdin and R. Strawbridge, Jr.

STOGIES COP FIRST TILT IN M. A. SERIES

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 9—(AP.)—Tommy Bridges limited the Charleroi Governors to three hits here yesterday to give Wheeling its first victory of the Middle-Atlantic championship play-off series, 2 to 1. The series now stands:

	W.	L.
Charleroi	2	1
Wheeling	1	2

Poor base-running held the Stogie scoring down, the Haley crew having made 14 hits off Byham, who went the full route for the visitors. Most of the Wheeling hits, however, came with two out.

Bridges fanned 12, in addition to allowing but a trio of hits, and handled the situation so that life was never in danger. The Charleroi contenders tallied the tally in the fourth after two were out, when Gallupe doubled to right center and scored on Phillips' single to the same locality. Joseph's roller in the ninth was the only other blow off the Tennessee Collegian.

The Stogies manufactured a run in the opening inning after two were down, when Welker doubled off the left field wall and scored on Zupancic's single down the third base line.

In the ninth inning, when Wheeling scored its winning run, Welker led off with a single and was sacrificed to second. Manager Rice ordered Byham to walk Bessenbach and King, thus filling the bases. Doljak laid down a roller and Welker came home, thus making Rice's strategy go for naught. Rice fielded the ball but he failed to get a runner.

In the first inning, with none down, the bases were loaded with Stogies, but Manager Pat Haley left third before Bordes intended sacrifice fly was caught and he was doubled.

Bessenbach, Welker and Lucas shared the limelight with Bridges. Bessenbach climbed the left field fence to grab Phillips' fly and Welker leaped into the ozone to make a one-handed stab. Lucas made a flying tackle dive to snatch Welker's smash into the corner of the left field fence. Sixteen Stogies were left stranded on the sacks to six for the Governors.

The fourth game will be played here today. The score:

WALTONS HOLD CONVENTION

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 9.—More than 5,000 members of the Izaak Walton League of America were here today for the annual state convention of the Pennsylvania division, which opened today and will close tomorrow.

The state convention this year has developed into a sectional affair and six other states besides Pennsylvania had representatives at the convention for the purpose of working out a uniform program of legislation to be submitted to the legislatures of seven Middle Atlantic states.

A number of distinguished men, both nationally and sectionally known, were here for the convention. Among them were Ozark Ripley, nationally known author and naturalist; Ross L. Leffler, president of the Pennsylvania board of game commissioners; John Slautterback, executive secretary of the state game commission; Dr. Thomas E. Winchoff, of the bureau of research of the state game commission; N. R. Butler, state fish commissioner; Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries; Charles E. Dodworth, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters; Dr. Henry Baldwin Ward, national president of the Izaak Walton League of America; Dr. William M. Moore, of Philadelphia, state president; Grover C. Lardner, of Philadelphia, and many others.

This evening a banquet will be held at which National President Ward and Ozark Ripley will speak, while election of state officers will be held at the business session tomorrow.

Farley Would Stop Routis-Battalino Go

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—As one friend to another, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, has addressed a letter to Thomas E. Donohue, Connecticut Boxing Commissioner, explaining why he thinks Donohue should put his foot down on the proposed feather weight titular bout between Andre Routis, the champion, and Bat Battalino.

Farley declared that "there is no justification for the bout taking place in Connecticut or in any other state that has an agreement with us." In view of the fact that Routis is under suspension in New York State.

Grove City Squad In First Scrimmage

GROVE CITY, Pa., Sept. 9.—The Crimson grid squad got its first taste of scrimmage here today when Coaches Berry and Moon lined up four teams for action in the afternoon session. The teams, using simple plays were scrimmaged for two hours in an effort to get a line on the new players.

Several of the first-year men showed promise but little can be said regarding whether they will be able to replace the old men or not, till further scrimmages are held this week. Linemen in particular showed future promise, and it is believed that Berry will get a first string man or two out of the new squad.

Big Ten Grid Chiefs To Discuss Rules

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Officials of Western Conference football are to meet here Saturday for discussion of football rules interpretation for the coming season, it was announced today.

Those who will give interpretations of the rules include Maj. John Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Big Ten, Glenn Thistlethwaite, of Wisconsin, and Amos A. Stagg, of the University of Chicago.

MISS M'GARY WINNER

MASSAPEQUA, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(INS.)—Miss Ethel McGary, of the Women's Swimming Association, is assured of her National A. A. U. senior long-distance swimming championship for another year. Yesterday Mis McGary defeated a field of nine in the annual four-mile swim, covering the distance in 1:31:49 1-5.

FIVE POINTS WINS

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 9. — Five Points, with Ted Bair on the mound, scored a 2-1 win over the Havana Red Sox yesterday, before 2,000 fans. The game was one of the best in Points history.

NURMI SHARES HONORS

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 9.—INS.)— Paavo Nurmi, famous phantom Finn, broke even in two races here, losing to the Polish runner Petkiewicz in a 3,000-meter race and winning a four-mile jaunt from the Pole.

O'Doul Boosts Average in Big Six

Associated Press.

With four hits out of six times at bat in two games at St. Louis, Frank O'Doul, of Philadelphia, added three points to his average, jumping to .398 and increasing his margin over Babe Herman, of Brooklyn, in the race for the batting championship of the Big Six and the National League. Herman got only one out of four against Pittsburgh and dropped one point to .392. Rogers Hornsby added four points to his average with four out of five against the Braves, reaching the 200-hit mark, and Babe Ruth picked up one point. Foxx and Simmons were idle. The standing:

Clarence Ross Wins Nine-Mile Swim

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Clarence Ross, of Brooklyn, outswam 57 rivals in a nine-mile race in the St. Lawrence River yesterday to capture first prize of $350. Ross covered the course in two hours, 37 minutes, 42 seconds to beat Marvin Nelson, of Fort Dodge, Ia., by two laps. Lyall Hubbard, of Toledo, was third; Morris Hume, Seattle, Wash., fourth, and William Sadlo, Jr., of New York, fifth.

BOATS SINK IN OUTBOUND REGATTA

CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Pa., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Lou H. Schrader, Youngstown, O., and R. V. Ritchey, Akron, had narrow escapes here yesterday when their speedboats collided in the Class C race of the outboard regatta sponsored by Ray H. Wise, commodore of the Anchor Outboard Club, of Akron. Nine boats were trying to make the first turn at the same time when Ritchey's craft struck that of Schrader. Holes were punched in both boats and Schrader's motor was shattered. The boats went to the bottom and the drivers were rescued by the Red Cross boat.

Ivy Leroy, Youngstown, also sank his craft trying to make the three-quarter turn in the Class C.

Thomas, of Parkersburg, W. Va., won the Class C event; third in Class D and second in the free-for-all.

Grand Circuit Meet Opens at Aurora

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 9.—(AP.)—After an absence from Illinois of several years, Grand Circuit racing will be resumed today with the opening of a three-day meeting at Exposition Park here.

Thiel Candidates At Conneaut Lake

GREENVILLE, PA., Sept. Forty candidates for the Theil College football team entered a 10-day training period at Conneaut Lake last Thursday afternoon. Tink Rowley, head coach, will be assisted by Jack Stoeber, athletic director at the school.

The boys are quartered in the Elmwood Hotel and are working out at the fairgrounds. It is probable that Coach Rowley will carry out the plea of naming a captain for each game rather than have his men select one for the season. No leader was elected at the close of the 1928 campaign.

Corbett, Dempsey 'On Air' Tomorrow

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 9.—Jim Corbett and Jack Dempsey are going before the mike together tomorrow night. Their stuff will be over the WEAF chain between 10 and 10:30 Eastern Standard time.

WEST VIEW TO DRILL

The West View eleven, independent grid champion of 1928, is to hold another practice next Friday evening at West View Park. West View intends to open its season on Sunday, September 22, with the best opposition available.

"Cremo as safe as certified foods"

"I certify Cremo as pure and sanitary" Says

Alfred W. McCann

noted pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"Cremo is my idea of a cigar fit for your mouth . . . because it is made in a manner that I applaud!

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U.S. Government approved methods. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way . . . and Cremo is made by amazing inventions that fill, wrap and tip the cigars in the Cremo factories that are air-flooded, sun-bathed, scientifically clean.

"That's why Cremo reaches your lips sanitary and safe!"

The superiority of Certified Cremo starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported Sumatra wrapper! Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar that the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

How often have you been disgusted with the filthy, germ-breeding places where some cigars are made . . . dark, stuffy factories . . . warm, dingy shops and windows . . . where dirty fingers roll the cigars and spit used to seal the ends! What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

"I certify Cremo sanitary and clean" Alfred W. McCann

Government Subscription Taken Quickly; Credit Tax Exemption.

SUBSCRIPTION books for the new Treasury 4⅞ per cent note issue will be closed today. This early action indicates that the demand for the new issue has been fully up to expectations and doubtless accelerated by the novel feature of tax exemption offered by the notes. That subscriptions have been far in excess of the treasury's needs is further suggested by the announcement that orders coming in the mail tomorrow will not be included in the total, something of a new departure from what has been customary practice for years. Evidently the tax exemption feature, put forward for the purpose of attracting the participation of wealthy individuals, has had the desired effect in arousing interest in that direction.

A spectacular advance in cotton marked the re-opening of the market after the customary mid-day recess to digest the contents of the monthly government bureau report on the condition of the crop. The market had been moving 10 to 14 points under Saturday's final levels when recess was taken. The report proved much more bullish than had been anticipated, with the indicated yield cut to 14,825,000 bales, far under the average of private estimates of 15,100,000 bales and more than 700,000 bales under the government estimate as of August 1. The feature of the report was the unusually low condition reported for Texas and Oklahoma, which produce near 40 per cent of the crop.

ACTIVITY in the food group seems to be centered on Standard Brands, the Fleischmann-Royal Baking combination. This issue was very active during its short stay on the curb and since its admission on the stock exchange there have been daily instances of good buying. Although officials state that it will be at least a year before all the benefits of the consolidation are realized, an improvement in the earning power of Royal Baking should be noted from the start and the introduction of a new Fleischmann product will stimulate sales of this unit. Advertising of the Chase & Sanborn coffee will soon be instituted on a national scale and it is hoped to duplicate the success which the Maxwell House coffee people have attained through advertising mediums.

Seldom has the line of demarcation been so clearly drawn between the so-called seasoned stocks and the less favored issues than it is at the moment. An analysis of last week's trading emphasizes this condition quite surprisingly. Out of a total of approximately 22,500,000 shares traded in during the week, transactions in the four most active stocks, namely Radio, General Motors, Anaconda Copper and Steel common, contributed upward of 4,780,000 shares, or approximately 20 per cent of the aggregate. The 13 next most active issues contributed an additional 4,300,000 shares, making a total turnover of approximately 9,000,000 shares for the 17 most active issues, or about 40 per cent roughly oof the business done in the entire list for the week.

THE contention has been raised time and again in the last month or more that the market had nothing to fear in the way of severe reaction at least until it had run into several days of heavy volume. For that reason much interest was centered in the fact that the turnover on Thursday and Friday of last week exceeded the 5,000,000-share mark by substantial margin for the first time since the end of March when the 20 per cent month rate was responsible for heavy selling. This development has tended to make for a good deal of nervousness in some quarters, while in others it is argued that the sudden expansion in trading volume may or may not be significant.

It has been sime time since there have been so manw rumors on prospective developments in Union Carbide. The street recently has been hearing reports that the company is making considerable progress in its negotiations for the absorption of American Cyanamid through an exchange of stock. Such an acquisition would be decidedly important for Carbide. Another rumor which has been widely circulated is that an oering of rights to stockholders is not far distant. Speculation as to these rights show that the street would expect something like one share for eight now held with a price of between $80 and $90 a share.

Copper Interests Back Manganese Tariff

BY GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THAT the steel industry of the United States may call the attention of Congress to the fact that copper ore is admitted duty free, while manganese ore, without which steel could not be produced, is now paying a duty equivalent to more than 100 per cent ad valorem, was hinted in steel circles here today. The manganese ore duty is reported to be the highest rate in the present tariff law.

This retaliatory state of mind among steel manufacturers is inspired by the discovery that the American Manganese Producers' Association, which is holding its second annual convention in Washington today and tomorrow, is directed and financed by some of the largest copper and zinc mining interests, some of the chief executives of which are directing and participating in the proceedings of the convention.

Copper Interests

AMONG the copper and zinc officials mentioned as presiding at the Manganese producers' convention are: A. J. Seligman, president of the Butte Copper and Zinc Company; Robert E. Dwyer, vice president of the Anaconda Copper Company; Francis P. Sinn, vice president of the New Jersey Zinc Company, and former ambassador, James W. Gerard, son-in-law of the late Marcus Daly, the Montana copper producer and politician. Mr. Seligman is treasurer of the Manganese Association.

The Manganese Producers' Association is demanding of Congress, not only the retention of the present high duty on manganese ore, but is asking for a 50 per cent increase. The interest of the copper and zinc producers in the situation is explained as due to the fact that some of their mines contain veins of comparatively low-grade manganese ore, which, the steel people say, can be mined and concentrated as a side line, only if mad e profitable by a sufficiently high tariff.

On Free List

IN opposition to the American Manganese Producers' Association, the steel industry all over the country, through the American Iron and Steel Institute, has been urging Congress to have manganese ore admitted duty free.

The Senate Finance Committee put manganese on the free list last month, after a number of Southern and Western steel manufacturers appeared in a hearing and submitted evidence from the Bureau of Mines, the Geological Survey, the Department of Commerce, several mining associations and other official and semi-official sources of information, to the effect that there is not enough manganese ore of metallurgical grade in this country to supply more than 6 to 8 per cent of the steel industry's annual requirements, forcing the industry to import the remaining 92 to 94 per cent, a situation which would be the same whether there were a duty on the ore or not.

Economic Absurdity

"AT the present rate of steel production," said a prominent steel operator today, "the steel industry is paying close to $1,000,000 a month in duties on manganese ore which must be imported simply because nature failed to deposit that mineral in this country in sufficient quantities of high enough grade to be commercially available for the manufacture of steel.

"The effort to retain the duty on manganese and increase it by 50 per cent, is therefore an attempt to make the American public pay $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 more per year for the steel it consumes so that the copper and zinc mining companies may have a market for about $500,000 worth of manganese ore, which is all that is produced in this country annually, after seven years of protection by a high tariff. The manganese duty is in fact of economic absurdity, and so regarded by all scientific bodies and experts who have studied the subject."

U. S. RUBBER OUTLOOK

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Net profit of United States Rubber Company in August after all charges was approximately $800,000, an amount nearly 46 per cent in excess of earnings for six months ended June 30 last. Although July earnings were comparatively small, the August showing indicates a very satisfactory second half-year, with the bulk of the company's large waterproof footwear business coming in the final quarter.

Orders currently on hand for footwear are substantially ahead of the volume on hand at this time last year. Seasonable weather in November and December would naturally advance waterproof footwear sales and would probably result in bringing second half profits together with first six months earnings to a total sufficient to cover the company's preferred dividend requirements for the entire year.

Federal Financing Bonds Taken Quickly

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP.) The avidity of the American investor in absorbing securities of his government was exemplified by the decision of the Treasury Department to close its books with the end of today's business on its latest financing operation—a $500,000,000 issue of certificates of indebtedness, maturing next June.

The issue, which was the regular quarterly governmental refinancing operation, contained two new features and apparently both are considered by Treasury officials to have been advantageous. The usual custom of receipt of subscriptions by mail on the following morning—which would be tomorrow in the case of this issue, upon the closing of the books was abandoned—as the Treasury officials were confident of the full absorption of the issue. For only three business days since last Thursday—one of the shortest periods on record for such a large financing operation—the issue was open to subscriptions.

The other new feature was the exemption of the certificates from all taxation except the federal, estate and inheritance levies. It was the first time that the Treasury has been able to utilize the tax exemption privilege in the issue of certificates since Congress granted authority for it. The enactment of the legislation came too late for the June operations.

Estimated European Sugar Output Higher

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Dr. Gustav Mikusch, of Vienna, forecasts the 1929-30 European beet sugar production, exclusive of Russia, as 7,821,000 short tons raw sugar, as compared to his final estimate of 7,755,000 short tons for the season just ended, according to the Department of Agriculture.

Production in Russia is placed at 1,631,000 short tons in 1929-30 and 1,570,000 short tons for 1928-29, making a total of 9,452,000 short tons for all Europe, which is 127,000 short tons larger than the figures for 1928-29.

Dixie Gas Adds Towns to Lines

The Dixie Gas and Utilities Company has added to its system the towns of Dayton, Liberty, Crosby, Highlands, Lufkin and Sourlake, Tex.

The company will complete distribution in Humble within the next 30 days and it is estimated these towns will add over 2,000 customers to the system during the first year's operation.

PROF. IRVING FISHER

Babson, famed statistician, who predicts that the present high trend of the stock market portends a heavy fall in the near future of from 60 to 80 points. Prof. Fisher, noted economist of Yale, expresses the opinion that the present high stock market is not unnatural and that stocks will continue as they are.

Indicated Cotton Crop Is Smaller

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Crop reporting board of Department of Agriculture places condition of U. S. cotton crop as of September 1, last, as 55.4 per cent of normal versus 69.6 per cent August 1, last, and 60.3 per cent September 1, 1928.

Total indicated production is estimated at 14,850,000 500-pound bales, against 15,543,000 August 1, last, and 1928 crop of 14,478,000 bales.

Census Bureau reports 1,570,030 running bales were ginned from 1929 crop prior to September 1, versus 956,577 in same period 1928, and 1,533,577 in 1927 period.

When trading was resumed on the Cotton Exchange, after publication of report, prices advanced about $3 a bale on active buying.

Paragon Acquires Valvoline Company

CINCINNATI, Sept. 9.—Negotiations for acquisition of the majority common stock of Valvoline Oil Company by Paragon Refining Company are expected to be completed today or tomorrow.

Paragon will buy at $200 a share between 25,00 and 30,000 shares of Valvoline common stock.

Asbestos Firms Plan Big Merger

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Plans for merging the Southern Asbestos Company with the Thermoid Company, thereby forming the second largest brake-lining manufacturing company in the country and one of the largest earning properties in the asbestos industry, were announced today by R. J. Stokes, president of Thermoid.

The Thermoid Company already owns controlling interest in the Southern Asbestos Company. In a letter addressed to the minority stockholders, Mr. Stokes states that his company is offering to exchange 4 1-3 shares of its 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for 10 shares of Southern Asbestos common stock. The offer expires on October 10, 1929.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Losses of one to three points appeared in prices of convertible bonds in the early trading today. Offerings of American Telephone 4½s and International Telephone 4½s, the leaders, were larger than in recent sessions and the two debentures declined 2½ and 3 points, respectively. American I. C. Chemical 5½s dipped to a new low for the current movement.

Despite the favorable reception of the new treasury financing at 4⅞ per cent and reports that the issue would aparently be widely distributed among individual investors as well as banks, the bond list as a whole attracted little attention. A few railroad obligations traded in moderate blocks at virtually no variations from the last sales on Saturday. Industrials and utilities likewise were steady, but inactive.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Refined Sugar Price Advanced

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The American Sugar Company advanced refined sugar 10 points to 5.40c a pound, effective at the opening on Wednesday.

DAVISON QUITS AS GULF HEAD

In order to devote his entire time to the direction of the Davison Coke and Iron Company, which he founded this year, George S. Davison, president of the Gulf Refining Company and 20 affiliated companies, and vice president of the Gulf Oil Corporation, has resigned, effective October 1, it became known today.

For many years he has been one of the outstanding figures in the oil business of the United States, and has taken an active part in civic and philanthropic affairs of Pittsburgh.

TO SAIL SOON

Mr. Davison will sail for Japan October 10, as a delegate of the American Society of Civil Engineers and as a representative of a number of technical educational institutions of the United States, to the World's Engineering Congress in that country in November.

He was born in Lawrenceville. After leaving Central High School he entered Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y. For a time he was identified with the engineering department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, later conceiving the idea for the Bessemer Railroad, which was located and built through his efforts.

In its construction he saw a means by which the Carnegie Steel Company plants here might have a connection with the Upper Lakes. He laid out, constructed and managed the Monongahela Street Railway system, which embraces the present lines east of Squirrel Hill.

CITY PLANNER

He is a former member of the City Planning Commission, and holds membership on the citizens' committee on city plan. He was one of the originators of the Town Hall idea, and is chairman of the special committee of the Chamber of Commerce which promoted the bond issue of $6,000,000 for erection of a Town Hall in Pittsburgh.

He is a director of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce and the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, a past president of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Engineers Society of Western Pennsylvania, chairman of the City Transit Commission and president of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh.

PLANE OUTPUT ESTIMATE

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—It is becoming increasingly evident that many optimistic forecasts of production, sales and earnings in the aviation industry for 1929 made earlier in year must now sustain a substantial downward revision in view of current conditions and prospects for the remainder of the year.

Production estimates for airplanes have been made frequently as high as 15,000 units for the year. Best available opinion places output between 6,000 and 7,000 planes. While these figures are less than half the 15,000 mark, they represent a decided increase over 1928, when 4,346 planes and 3,496 engines were manufactured.

Despite the fact many makers are booked weeks ahead on orders, there are distinct signs of overproduction in various types of planes, and a curtailment of output will undoubtedly be found a necessity by many manufacturers. At the same time others are vigorously going ahead with expansion plans, which in some cases will double their present production facilities.

Competition is particularly noticeable among engine and small plane manufacturers and is resulting in price reductions which affect profit margins.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Forced Down | Big Bulge in Lone Star

STOCKS FORCED DOWNWARD BY SELLING

Efforts to Rally General List Result in Failures; Fluctuations Are Wide

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The stock market ran into a secondary reaction today after several unsuccessful attempts had been made to rally the general list by bringing forward new leaders.

In the absence of any adverse news developments, the decline was regarded as a further correction of a top-heavy speculative position. Trading was in fairly heavy volume, with selling pressure particularly acute against several of the high grade railroad, steel and public utility.

CALL MONEY DROPS

Call money renewed at 8 per cent as against an opening rate of 9 and a closing rate of 6 last Friday. While the prompt and heavy over-subscription of the new Treasury issue was regarded as a favorable omen, Wall street apparently is still disturbed over the prospect of a mid-month credit pinch and the danger that a heavy withdrawal of foreign funds from New York might cause serious credit complications. The prospect of a bitter fight over the new tariff bill and renewed agitation for legislation to curb brokers' borrowings when Congress opens also has had a tendency to discourage large scale speculative operations.

Wide fluctuations took place in several of the high priced specialties. Simimons Company advanced 1¾ points to 175, broke to 162, rallied to 172 and was down below 170 again in the early afternoon. Case Threshing rallied 22 points and broke 10. American Water Works converted an early gain of 3 points into a loss of 4.

SHARP LOSSES SCORED

Sharp losses in some of the dividend-paying rails proved disappointing to small traders who have been looking for a big rail market as a result of the steady increase in freight traffic, and the excellent character of recent earnings statements. Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific and Chicago & Northwestern all sold down 3½ to 5½ points, weakness of the last-named probably being caused by the announcement of new equipment in financing and rumors of a new convertible bond issue.

United States Steel common was hammered down 6¾ points to 241½, bringing it more than 20 points below the recent high. Bethlehem sold down nearly 5 points. Vanadium, on the other hand, showed consistent strength, selling at least 6 points above last week's final quotations.

Auburn Auto broke 15 points, Commonwealth Power 10 and Westinghouse Electric, Commercial Solvents, Atlas Powder, American Telephone, Air Reduction, General Electric, Consolidated Gas, American Can, Radio and Loose Wiles Biscuit sold down 3½ to 6½ points.

HOLDINGS LIQUIDATED

Leading commission houses continued to call attention to the prospect of further sharp readjustments in prices, leading many small investors and traders to liquidate their holdings. Pools tried valiantly to mark up their favorites, but in most cases they ran into large offerings of stock which threatened to exhaust their buying power, and temporarily withdrew from the market.

Outside the stock market, chief speculative interest centered in the rally of $2 to more than $3 a bale in cotton futures on the publication of the government crop report, showing an indicated yield of 14,825,000 bales, or only 62,000 bales below the average of Cotton Exchange member estimates.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—Cotton opened steady today at a decline of 4 to 7 points on reports of further rains in the South and relatively easy Liverpool cables. Active months sold about 6 to 10 points net lower under the early offerings, but there was considerable covering and some trade buying. This proved sufficient to steady the market and prices recovered to about Saturday's closing figures by the end of the first half hour. Trading was quiet and the bulk of it was attributed to further evening up in preparation for the government crop report scheduled for publication at midday.

Liverpool cables said there had been hedge selling and general liquidation in Liverpool with the offerings absorbed by covering and trade calling. Part of the early buying here may have been promoted by reports of a good business in the domestic cloth markets last week.

The market eased later in the morning under realizing or liquidation with December selling off to 19.08c and March to 19.25c, or about 17 to 20 points net lower. There was enough covering to check the decline at these figures and prices were several points up from the lowest when business was suspended to receive the government report. The latter, placing the condition at 55.4 and the indicated crop at 14,825,000 bales attracted bullish comment, although it was only 62,000 bales below the average of the recent private report. December immediately sold up to 19.69c and March to 19.82c when the market reopened, or about 60 points above the low level of the morning.

National Freight Buys Sheldon Co.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The National Freight Company of New York City, recently formed to do a general freight forwarding business in conjunction with the Pennsylvania railroad and other important rail lines announced today, through President E. C. Strohm, that it has acquired by stock purchase the business and property of G. W. Sheldon & Co. of New York and Chicago, one of the oldest and most important domestic and foreign forwarding concerns in the country.

W. Va. Led in Coal Output Last Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—For the second successive year the Bureau of Mines has reported West Virginia led all other states in 1928 in bituminous coal production. Her output totaled 132,952,159 net tons. Pennsylvania, with 131,202,163 tons, and Kentucky, with 61,860,379 tons, were second and third, respectively.

LONE STAR AND BLAW KNOX UP HERE

Lone Star Gas dashed ahead at the opening of business on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today and by the end of the first half hour had added more than three points to last week's gain of 3¼.

Urgent buying made its appearance on the opening and large blocks of the stock were taken "at the market," causing a mild scramble of shorts to cover commitments made last week when the price established its new high above $50 a share. In the early market today the stock reached 55½ before the upturn halted. Nebulous rumors of a great gas utility combination are heard in connection with the stock's activity, but there has been nothing official to confirm the reports. However, persons in touch with Lone Star's affairs have been bullish on the issue all year and it is generally thought that the more important holdings of the stocks are intact, and, if anything, have been added to over the summer.

Blaw Knox rushed up sharply, continuing the move which got under way the latter part of last week. Opening strong at 62, the stock gained another full point in the opening flurry and held around its best level in the subsequent dealings.

United Engineering developed noticeable strength in the afternoon dealings but other issues in the industrial section were quiet and narrow. There was a fair turnover in Screw & Bolt at unchanged quotations but Lone Star continued to dominate the market right up to the close.

Europe's Dilemma: How to 'Make Work' Yet Cut Costs

By B. C. FORBES

EUROPE has one double-edged economic problem: To provide more employment, and at the same time to reduce production costs.

America has lately faced the same problem, though in milder form.

HAPPILY, labor in the United States has come to recognize, in most fields, that it is not the best policy to give the least amount of work for the highest pay that can be wrung from employers. Our intelligent labor leaders understand economics quite as well as does the average employer. They know that prosperity can not be enjoyed by the ordinary American home if American workers practice laziness and loafing, turning out just as little as they can get by with. They have grasped the elementary truth that prosperity for all does not come from scarcity but from plenty, not from famine but from abundance.

While it is true that there still are trades that believe in restricting production per man to the lowest possible minimum, America has made more headway than other countries in bringing about co-operation between employers and employed for the purpose of increasing production, increasing efficiency, increasing economy. That is one powerful reason why American industry has attained world leadership in many fields.

UNEMPLOYMENT has been the chief bane of Europe since the war. Government relief on a scale never before known was forced upon various countries—Britain's unemployment "dole" is the most flagrant example of all.

Statesmen found themselves at their wits end to develop work for the workers. Pressure frequently was brought to bear upon industries to load themselves up with additional men even though not actually needed. The whole tendecy was to swell rather than reduce working forces.

Of course, this policy tended to raise production costs. The higher the cost, the smaller the quantity consumers could or would buy. Also, inflated costs had a depressing effect upon export sales.

MEANWHILE American industrialists were active as never before in introducing new or additional labor-saving machinery, in improving production processes, in effecting economies, in expounding mass production through consolidations, in penetrating foreign markets with unprecedented vigor. Their efforts were favored by an abundance of available capital, by ability to grant credit, by extremely low marine freight rates and by the stability of America's currency.

BRITAIN, it will be recalled, has been afflicted by gigantic labor upheavals, by ruinous strikes in her most basic and most important industries—coal and iron, ship-building, textiles, transportation, etc. These upheavals aggrevated the nation's already unhappy economic condition. The necessity for governmental aid to the jobless became greater than ever. Taxes, consequently, became heart-breakingly, not to say back-breakingly heavy.

Some progress—indeed considerable progress—has been made in composing the main differences between the employers and employed in various important industries, and one finds that there is now a disposition in financial and business circles to take a distinctly less pessimistic view of Britain's future.

But how to provide work for all and at the same time strengthen Britain's ability to compete in the markets of the world by cutting costs to the bone remains an unsolved problem.

THERE was brought under my nose a stark illustration of how Italy "makes work" for her workers. Entering the port of Genoa on one of the excellent Dollar round-the-world passenger-and-freight steamers, I noticed that apparently every one of the many ships in the harbor was being loaded from lighters and not direct from the piers, this notwithstanding that Genoa has ample facilities for installing modern methods of loading and unloading.

Inquiries elicited the information that, even when a liner is brought alongside a pier, all cargo first must be unloaded into lighters, or barges, and all cargo taken on must first be lowered into these same lighters and then hoisted aboard ship.

When I asked one experienced shipping man the whyfor of such a slow, antiquated, inefficient, costly way of doing things, he replied: "Why it is done to give work to as many people as possible. Yes, modern methods could very easily be employed, but as they would cut down the number of men given work each time a ship enters or leaves, there would be such a howl of protest that the authorities would not dare to act. Mussolini knows how dangerous it is for a country to be filled with unemployment, and instead of doing things which would reduce employment, he is spending millions in road building and other government activities to provide employment." He added: "It is just the Italians' way of doing things and there is no use kicking about it."

NOT all of Europe by any means has yet become aroused to the need for adopting modern economical methods. This gives the United States an incalculable advantage in her battle for supremacy.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP.)—The curb market turned irregular today, as the liquidation which appeared late Saturday was resumed with the beginning of the week. The selling was in fairly moderate volume, however, and recessions generally were limited to a fairly narrow margin.

The fact that call money renewed at 8 per cent today, after having fallen from 9 to 6 on Friday, indicated that the large influx of funds late last week was due to special conditions and that money remained fundamentally tight. With this in view and the possibility of an upset in the money market with the approach of the mid-month settlement period, when about $1,000,000,000 in income tax payments and treasury refinancing will change hands, traders found little to inspire further operations for the advance.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales' column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales' column of bond list):

AVIATION WINS HELP OF BIG BUSINESS

Large Interests Desert Standpatism and Support Infant Air Industry Needs

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Sept 9.—A unique characteristic of the infant industry of aviation is that it has already won the support of big business and high finance.

In the past, when other new indutries were launched, big interests were skeptical at the start, and almost invariably left the pioneer work to daring newcomers. One reason for the new attitude toward aviation is a change in the philosophy of big business and high finance. Large interests have forsaken standpatism, and have committed themselves to research and applied science, which emphasize the fluid, dynamic character of the world of affairs. Outstanding financiers recently have witnessed the successive rise of new industries—automobile, radio, electrical refrigeration—and are now adjusted to the view that novelty is no reason for skepticism.

FAVOR TRANSPORTATION

Of the leading well sponsored aviation groups, Aviation Corporation is alone placing the chief emphasis on air transportation, rather than on manufacturing planes and accessories. I asked Graham B. Grosvenor, president of the company, to explain this viewpoint.

"I believe," Mr. Grosvenor replied, "that the success of production companies in the final analysis is contingent on the success of air transportation. If there is to be anything to commercial aviation, the transportation units must be put on a paying basis. Our company feels that it is important to get the air routes established in these pioneering days before the industry becomes fixed and institutionalized. Furthermore, we are still in a development stage in manufacturing. We stand ready in the air routes which we operate to take advantage of any change in models or fashions.

"Unlike airplanes or engines, the air routes themselves will not go out of fashion or become obsolete. The company is stabilizing itself and assuring itself a position in the industry irrespective of the turn of inventions by acting as jobbers for accessories and supplies of numerous manufacturers. Through some of our units, we also manufacture planes and aerial cameras. The company is set up to endure through a period of rapidly changing conditions."

BUILD FOR FUTURE

Mr. Grosvenor disclosed that it was the policy of the directors to build for the future—and to ignore current dividends. He said that the company was reinvesting profits in establishing new routes, which during the initial periods are conducted at a loss. Mr. Grosvenor added that the postoffice, in awarding mail contracts which operate as a partial subsidy, favored companies that were using part of their income to develop passenger and express air routes. Mr. Grosvenor said that passenger carrying was profitable when the planes are full, but that the loads vary greatly from day to day. The service between Tulsa and Oklahoma City is the best patronized, and is a profitable unit.

"For a time, the combined air and rail service will spread," Mr. Grosvenor said, "but eventually passengers will choose between all air and all rail service. That time will come when night flying is as safe as day flying. Already much progress has been made in that direction, but further improvement in respect to use of radio as a guide in fogs, better lighted airways, frequent landing fields is being sought.

"The next step should be the building of airways by states. The cost will be trifling compared with concrete highways for automobiles. Aerial police will be needed to keep traffic to the right."

Mr. Grosvenor explained that his company was not thinking of today, but of tomorrow. "We are setting up the machinery now," he confided, "to take advantage of future developments in aviation when the 25,000,000 who are now children grow up. To them flying will seem perfectly natural."

INDUSTRY WEEDED OUT

Asked whether amateurs and promoters have not overdone the public interest in aviation, Mr. Grosvenor said: "The weeding out process is already under way. Selected small companies, which have something of merit, will be taken over by the major aviation groups. Others doubtless will fall by the wayside. The big, well-managed companies will go steadily forward.

"Our company is already operating profitably, despite the fact that it charges off the cost of establishing new air routes to current earnings, instead of making them a capital charge."

Mr. Grosvenor said that his company maintained one of the largest airplane engine plants for experimental purposes, though the company was not yet producing engines.

As for lighter-than-air machines, Mr. Grosvenor pointed out that his company was co-operating with Goodyear to inaugurate a Zeppelin week-end mail service between Los Angeles and Honolulu. The new project requires congressional legislation.

NEW ORDERS AID STEEL MILLS

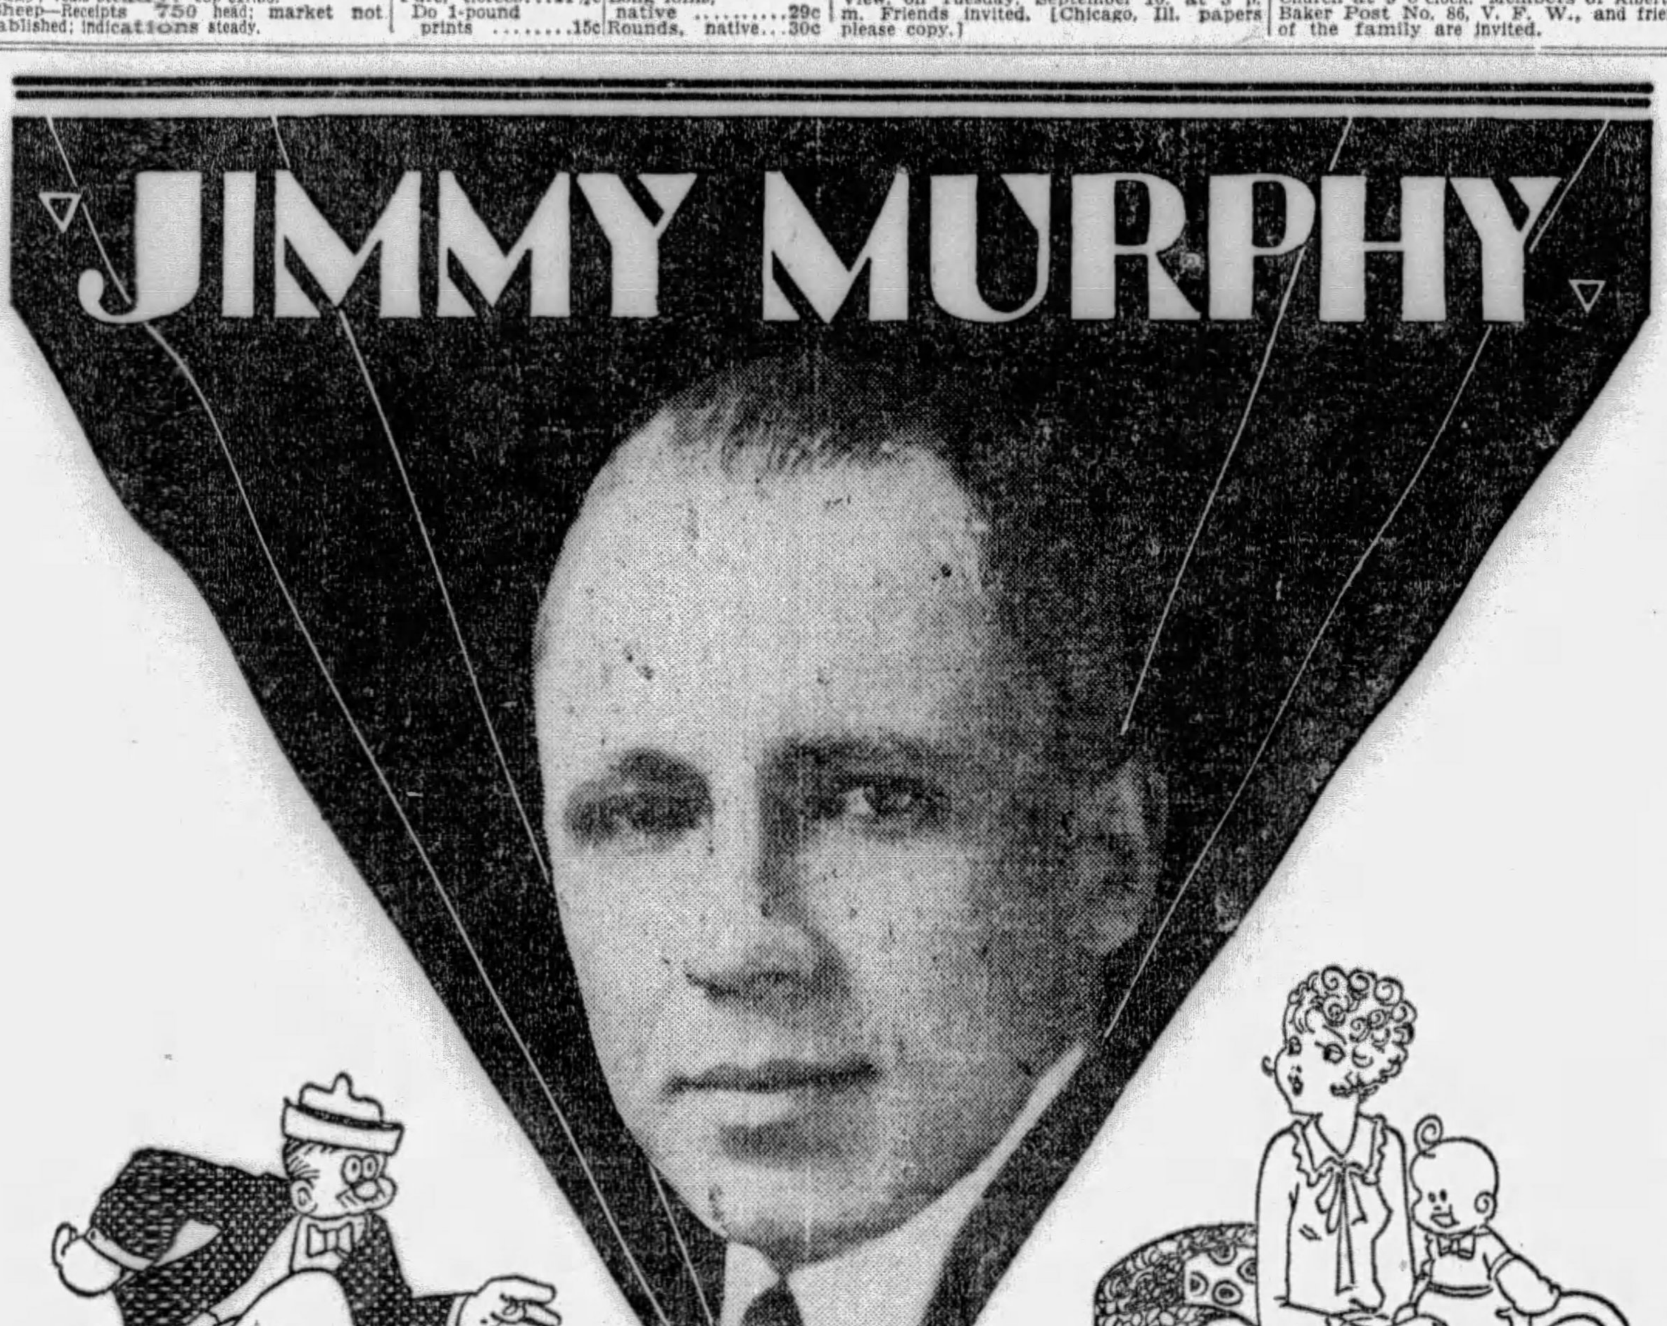
YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 9.—In the Mahoning Valley, steel production has been steadied by new business received since Labor Day, and is averaging 85 per cent with the independents and 80 per cent with Steel Corporation plants. For two weeks prior to Labor Day one executive said his company maintained schedules only at the expense of backlogs.

This week's schedule shows 46 of 51 independent open hearth furnaces melting; 15 of 21 tube mills under power, 112 of 120 sheet mills, tin mills at 80 per cent; independent bar mill capacity at 75 per cent, strip mills at 80 to 85 per cent.

Sheet steel production is averaging around 90 per cent, which is unusually high for this season. Steel production is averaging 12 per cent higher than last year.

Both Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Republic Steel are averaging around 85 per cent.

Sharon Steel Hoop is maintaining output at 90 per cent.



Creator of "Toots and Casper"

That is, he is the creator, with the help of Mrs. Jimmy! From all accounts she must be more than a better half. She is undoubtedly the best half, for she is the original of pretty Toots! But long before the days of the GREAT Jimmy Murphy, a lad by that name was born into an Irish heaven called Chicago. The far west became his mecca. As a political cartoonist in Portland, then San Francisco, his Star came up over the horizon. It led him eastward, where he joined Tom Powers, that dean of political cartoonists, on the New York Journal. After that came Toots and Casper. And the obliging baby that never grew up. With one wisp of hair and one tooth, Buttercup has outdone Jackie Coogan in the way of family support. No wonder all Jimmy Murphy has to do is motor around and break speed laws. He protests, however, that he works all the time. Whether he is motoring, going to Europe, or spending a few lazy months in California, he's thinking up ideas for Toots and Casper.

BUGS BAER Says

GRAPES, DOCTORS AND SUNSHINE.

DR. DORAN, of the prohibition escadrille, with branches in all leading cities, recently made a statement that should bear fruit.

"Bugs" Baer

The good doctor, if possible, warned over-zealous prohibition cadets against breaking and entering private homes and interfering with fermentation of grape juice.

The doc further revolutionized sudden entrances and quick exits by conceding that fermentation of fruit juices is an act of nature.

The doc ain't up on his amendments. That act has been repealed.

Since reading Prof. Doran's biography of a prune in the act of stewing itself in its own juices, we have made exhausted experiments with fruit juices.

We did not try the apple. Isaac Newton tried that apple gag and got a pop on the eye.

Neither did we go in for science and research on a watermelon.

Coming from an old family of barristers, we could never forgive a watermelon for being 90 per cent water.

But we did put a grape out in the California sun. And when a grape is kissed by the California sun, it's smacked good and plenty.

Nothing happened to the grape for the first minute. The sun was just playing with it.

At the end of the third minute, the grape started to get red in the face. Indicating a high blood pressure in local soda water fountains.

At the end of an hour, fermentation had set in from all angles.

The grape became lopsided.

We applied a tire gauge to it and it showed a pressure of 36 pounds all around.

Just the ideal pressure for touring on rough roads.

It contained some deadly toxins. But not in habit-forming quantities.

At the start of the second day, that grape started to leap like a Mexican jumping bean.

But, we over-experimented. Just when the grape was all set for the Christmas rush, it turned pale and then collapsed.

It became a raisin.

We followed Dr. Doran's homeopathic advice and allowed that chunk of round fruit to ferment to its grape's content. But it turned out that its content was not precipitate.

From now on we refuse to look upon the wine when it is red or the grape when it is sunburned.

REV. BARTON BOYCOTTS LAMAR MOVIE THEATRE

(Text by Courtesy of Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Rev. Paul Barton at his evening out-of-door meeting, confined himself largely to an attack on the local theatre. He indicated that he and those who feel like he does, have been boycotting the local theatre.

Rev. Barton said: I expressed to the theatre management soon after my arrival here a desire to have some opportunity to express to the management privately some ways of possible co-operation between theatre and church. This wish has never been gratified. I desire and feel it my duty to express here publicly why I do not attend the local theatre.

My reason is to be found in the theatre announcement. Allow me to read what appeared for two successive nights last week in our town paper.

Here the minister read this:

SHOW LAMAR'S PLAZA ADMISSION

With Hollywood's newest sensation—ALICE WHITE.

The hottest little wench that ever shook a scanty at a tired business man! When she dances, the floor smokes and they have to throw water on the orchestra. BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

United States Senate and Not Secretary Stimson Will Decide Question on American Entry Into World Court

Q.—Well, I see Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the League of Nations, told League members that the United States was ready to enter the world court under the Hurst-Root plan.

A.—Yes.

Q.—And now Secretary of State Stimson says it is O. K. with him and the President and we are ready to come in.

A.—Yes, but Secretary Stimson hasn't the last word.

Q.—Who has?

A.—The Senate.

Q.—Will the Senate object?

A.—Quite likely. The Hurst-Root plan, written by Sir Cecil Hurst, advisor to the British foreign office, abolishes reservation five, which the Senate considered necessary for our protection.

Q.—How does Secretary Stimson fit into this picture, anyway?

A.—He is one of the small group of Republicans who in 1920 signed a round robin to his fellow citizens asking them to vote for Harding as THE SUREST WAY TO GET US INTO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Q.—But Harding didn't try to put us in.

A.—No, if he ever had such an idea, he found the temper of the country was against it.

Q.—Well, is the world court part of the League of Nations?

A.—Of course it is and Elihu Root, emissary of the international bankers, ADMITS THAT IT IS.

Q.—When?

A.—In the discussions before the committee of international lawyers, which first framed the constitution of the world court, Elihu Root said:

"WE MUST FIRST CONSIDER THAT THIS NEW COURT MUST BE PROVIDED FOR AS PART OF A SYSTEM OF WHICH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS IS PART, WE CANNOT ACCEPT THE INVITATION OF THE LEAGUE'S COUNCIL AND RECOMMEND A PLAN FOR A COURT WHICH IS NOT GOING TO FORM A PART OF THE SYSTEM OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS."

Q.—Then Root is an advocate of our entrance into the League of Nations also?

A.—He has been one of the leading advocates; Mr. Root was the principal author of the round robin of 1920.

Q.—Well, well, and does Sir Eric Drummond also think the court part of the League?

A.—Sir Eric, in his instructions to the committee of international lawyers mentioned above, advised them that "THE COURT IS TO BE THE MOST ESSENTIAL PART OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS." When the court was finally organized, Sir Eric declared. "The definite establishment of the court completes the organization of the League."

Q.—What do we know about Sir Cecil Hurst in these matters?

A.—First, he wrote what is now called the Root or the Root-Hurst plan, which Root brought back to Stimson for approval. Second, Sir Cecil, in his report to a League conference urging acceptance of his substitute for reservation five, made a startling admission. He said:

"Advisory opinions are also of utility in enabling questions to be submitted to the court WHICH PARTIES TO THE SUIT ARE FOR VARIOUS REASONS UNWILLING THEMSELVES TO SUBMIT TO IT in the form of international litigation."

Q.—Isn't that exactly what the Senate was afraid of when it passed reservation five? Did not the Senate patriotically fear that questions like the Monroe Doctrine and restricted immigration would be submitted to the World Court, which we, "for various reasons were unwilling to submit to it."

A.—Certainly.

Q.—Isn't there going to be opposition in the country and discussion in the Senate before this deal to subordinate this country to foreign domination is finally put over on us?

A.—Undoubtedly. The Senate has been the great bulwark of American independence heretofore. Let us hope it will be so again.

'Phantom' Voter Charge Should Be Looked Into

If there be "phantoms" on the rolls of those assessed as qualified to vote on payment of tax, the list should be immediately purged and punishment should be sought for those responsible for the condition. District Attorney Gardner has stated that he would request a grand jury investigation of the matter if specific instances of fraudulent assessment were presented to him. It was thought likely the matter would come to a head today, with representatives of the Bar Association joined to those who are exercising vigilance to see that the coming primary and later general election are kept free from fraud.

It is rather shocking to the public to hear charges that preparations are being laid for widespread vote cheating in view of the fact that the courts have barely got through with meting rather stern justice to a large number of persons convicted of, or pleading guilty to, charges of election frauds in the past.

Whatever comes of the present accusations, it is not amiss to again warn political gangsters that election cheating has become a dangerous business in Pittsburgh. Padding election lists is one of the oldest and crudest methods of assuring success for a candidate or candidates by crooked means, and it is surprising that persons of any degree of intelligence should attempt such a thing these days. The public is not dumb even if it has been deluded often through its belief that the average of honesty extended even to political circles.

The people are in no temper to submit further to such outrageous election practices as have gone undetected in the past. Hence they will demand that a thorough probe of any indication of attempts to steal elections be made, whether it be through "phantom" voters, falsification of vote returns or any other kind of crookedness.

Extremists' Arrest Here Is Just What They Want

Pittsburgh does not handle its few political extremists intelligently. A meeting of Communists which ordinarily would not draw flies is given prominence by the arrest of the speakers, and a consequent flow of publicity.

The Liberal Club of Pittsburgh got far more attention from expulsions of several members from the University of Pittsburgh than it ever got from the airing of its political faiths. And attention is what they crave.

Men who are terribly afraid of the doctrines promulgated by Communists always miss the point that to leave them severely alone is the best way to handle them.

A Communist speaker is never happier than when he is being arrested, for he knows the arrest will get far wider attention than the speech he makes to a handful of men and women on a street corner. And instead of letting the extremists air their views, unmolested, someone is always stepping in to make an otherwise drab scene just a little dramatic.

It would seem that some place there is lacking a sense of balance as well as a sense of humor. It is not pleasant to read of the arrests of fledgling philosophers who from a soapbox would reform the existing system of government.

In some other cities the speakers with burning reforms are handled more adroitly. They are allowed to talk to their hearts' content. No one listens to them and everyone continues happy, except the extremists, and they are unhappy because no one, not even the police, will pay attention to them.

Why not let the extremists pop off?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

OF COURSE, you have your little family quarrels. Who doesn't. But why stay grouchy for several hours or even days afterward?

You think your life partner unreasonable; she reciprocates.

But are you as easy to live with in peace and harmony as you imagine?

There is a contributing cause when husbands and wives quarrel frequently.

A home disturbed is not entirely due to one person.

It is easy to excuse yourself and blame the wife of the husband.

You may not engage in quarrels to the extent of an exchange of unpleasantries, but you may refuse to talk and be disagreeable for days.

It would be far better to talk and get rid of your bad feelings.

Have it out and start afresh with a clean slate.

There is nothing more aggravating than the person who "won't speak."

That sort of thing grows on one.

If you have such a tendency get rid of it.

It is bad for health, and hurts the one who employs such methods worse than the other fellow.

If you have this habit, get out of it for your own sake and that of your family.

The longer you permit this condition to exist the harder it will be to overcome it.

Survival of the Past

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

A SWELL-LOOKING lawyer dropped in at a classroom in Harvard one day, and everybody was surprised. He had a roll of official-looking papers in his hands, and there was a great lot of ribbons and seals showing. This guy interrupted the prof that was talking, and after chatting with him a little while the lawyer raised one hand and says, "I have a bit of news that will interest all of youse guys. Charley Swift, the red-headed fellow in the third row, he had better listen especially. Charley, you are 21 today ain't you?"

"Yeah, I reckon I am," says Charley.

"Well, you come into a fortune of a hundred million bucks today, as a kind of a birthday surprise. You never heard of your great-aunt Maggie? She left it to you."

Charley got up and started for the door by himself.

"Hay!" says the lawyer, "you come with me, you know. You can't get the dough without me."

"That's all right," says Charley, "I'm just going out to lick my chemistry prof and hit the president in the eye. Then I'll go with you and get the dough."

EFFICIENCY KEEPS FIT

By Herbert Kaufman

SCIENCE nowadays occupies a desk in the office of trade.

Guesswork, the great "wasting disease of business," is gradually disappearing from industrial systems.

These cog-brained skeptics are "from Missouri." They take nothing for granted. They prod and pull and bend and hammer until they establish, to infinitesimal fractions, the durability, tensility and breaking point of every sample.

IT'S hard to estimate the billions saved thus annually in time and merchandise—BUT the very men who have found it so expedient to overhaul boiler and engine and pulley and wheel and belt—to give a timely twist of the screwdriver and a needed turn of the wrench—haven't yet sense enough to apply the same methods to themselves, and thereby postpone physical deterioration TOO.

Employers who never purchase equipment until they compare all the different models on the market, continue to engage men in the same haphazard way that ruled the Renaissance.

Ability and reliability are still the sole credentials of fitness. The only references demanded are those which attest to knowledge and honesty.

Stability is disregarded. Mental and moral flaws are guarded against, but no search is made for organic warps, fissures or rot-spots.

THE same logic that argues the shortsightedness of buying second-rate machinery advises that sturdiness, as well as character and deftness, be constituted a cardinal requirement in the applicant for work.

No man should be given a post of responsibility unless he is qualified by health as well as experience to fulfil the obligation.

A star salesman with bad teeth is likely to pass an agonizing night and meet an important customer the following morning, distracted, enervated and unable to concentrate.

A gluttonous factory foreman, addicted to indigestion, frequently thinks with his spoilt stomach and involves his firm in unnecessary labor disputes.

A dyspeptic attorney, however well grounded in the law, may be so irritable and nervous that a better poised but inferior counsel can salivate him before the jury.

WITHOUT command of faculties and vital forces, success is improbable. In near futures, mere record of past performances won't be sufficient qualification for promotion.

Before entrusting men with heavier loads we'll subject 'em to a series of scientific tests.

We'll "prod and pull and bend and hammer" until we establish the "durability, tensility and breaking point" of the candidate. We'll look at his teeth, sound his lungs and diagnose his blood, stomach, liver, kidneys and heart.

Folk who don't keep their bodies in first-class shape will go to the junk-heap.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up fairly betimes and with my wife to a five and ten store basement for a breakfast and tasty, too, and wandered about counters, amazed at the variety of gew-gaws, including dawn grey spats and monocles of clear glass.

Home to work, but fell to reading a biography of R. L. Stevenson and could scarcely put it down. And Verne Porter telephoned the most amusing quip I have heard this summer, but like many good ones, too indelicate to chronicle here.

So at sundown to walk with Bernard Sobel on the upper Drive and to a cafe with Lee and Maybelle Olwell and Jolly Bill of the radio barked fiercely at my dog but, he being deaf, paid no attention whatever. Then driving along the East River and to bed early.

Firemen stationed in theaters have been instructed to end the custom of theater goers snapping pocket lighters to read programs after the house is darkened. The practice has become so prevalent several near panics were barely avoided. From now on those so careless are to be led right out and handed over to a puff capped gendarme.

Every late afternoon West Indian Negroes play cricket on the field in Van Cortland Park. The appeal for Americans for the British game is so slight there is scarcely ever a handful of spectators. Cricket is dull—as dull as this paragraph. Wonder how much longer I'll be able to get away with this racket?

Those wand-bearing Algernons with penciled eyebrows might receive a shock by visiting a store on the Bowery near Chatham Square. It is a dingy jewelry shop and a sign in the window sneers: "Here is a chance for you male sopranos! Five dollar wrist watches as long as they last for $1. The biggest bargain for he-pansies in the whole city."

The Bowery, as usual, tags the end of the Big Parade. With Lindbergh wearing a wrist watch, a famous trans-Atlantic flier a monocle and two war heroes in spats, the Bowery must find something more sissified to shoot at. Any day now may bring a returning African lion hunter with a lace 'kerchief in his cuff! And that will be hard to yoo-hoo off!

It has been discovered only two per cent of murderers in New York in the past 15 years have been fat men. And the most ghastly crimes are almost invariably committed by those under weight. Watch out for the skinny guys!

At a smart dinner party in a private home during the week neither cocktails nor the usual table wine were served. There were 18 guests, all more or less worldlings. The host explained it as an experiment in prohibition. His future dinner parties would be governed by the reaction. There was a booth into which each was asked to print "yes" or "no" in block letters on blank slips and drop the decisions into a bowl. He said he would appreciate frank honesty. All favored his experiment, which may have been a mere gesture in politeness.

Gamblers are invariably attracted to mystery plays featuring shrieks in the dark and other shuddery abracadabra. Such performances somehow appeal to their lust for excitement. At first nights of mystery plays all the Broadway sports turn out en masse with, of course, the inevitable straw blondes in white ermines.

DEPARTING MOON

By Archibald Henderson

AS WE sit in our comfortable drawing rooms and listen in on the radio, we give little heed to the great cosmic forces of the universe. We know that all the world's, including our own little world, are spinning around like tops. But why is this? We do not know. Perhaps we shall never certainly know, so long as we live in this mundane phase.

The moon revolves around the earth. All the heavenly bodies are moving pretty fast. Arcturus, for example, is going at two hundred miles per second. Even this slow old bus of the earth is going fast—twenty miles a second. As compared with a cannon-ball, the speed of the earth is like that of an express train to a snail.

We are lucky that the law of gravitation is on the job. It may be that the day will come when the moon will begin to approach the earth. This would go on gradually until the moon would crash down upon the earth with indescribably destructive results.

Is such a picture merely fanciful? By no means; for the cosmos already presents us an example of this very phenomenon. Mars has a moon whose month is shorter than the day. It is now approaching the planet. That moon will gradually approach the planet; and perhaps ten centuries from now our descendants will witness in horror and amazement a great celestial tragedy, when the moon will crash down catastrophically and illuminate Mars to a white heat.

What is happening now with reference to the earth and the moon? The earth pulls with enormous force on the moon, and conversely. The moon is whirled around by the earth once a month by gravity. What is the actual amount of this force? An example will suffice. Suppose there were a great steel rod connecting the earth and the moon. How large would this steel rod have to be in order to keep the moon whirling around the earth? If it were not to be torn asunder by the colossal force, it would have to be more than four hundred miles thick. As it is, the moon is actually constantly seeking to fly off at a tangent.

The query arises: Is the moon always keeping the same distance from the earth? It is not; it is gradually receding from the earth. Of course, this rate is so small as to be entirely imperceptible. But it is revealed by mathematical calculation. It is the 24-millionth of a second per day. In 240,000,000 days the day will be a second longer than it is now. All this is because the earth, in whirling around, is slowed down this tiny amount by the retarding effects of the tides.

The moon is going away from the earth very slowly. it is true. Its distance is gradually increasing for precisely the same reason that the length of the day is increasing.

And now what is going to happen in the dim and remote future? Sir Oliver Lodge says: "The earth's rotation will gradually get slower and slower until its tides are wiped out too, and then the earth will turn the same face to the moon, and the two bodies will revolve around one another as if a solid rod joined them, neither rotating in reference to the other—then the solar tides will come in and make the day longer than the month, and when that happens everything will be reversed. The moon will no longer recede. It will begin to approach, until it rejoins its parent and comes crashing down on this earth."
